Mrs. Saggus Shoots Witness Against Husband

F. M. COMBS SHOT BY WIFE OF MAN WHO CAME CLEAR

Altercation Over Testimony Given by Combs at Trial Ends in Gunplay by Woman.

DR. SAGGUS AND WIFE MAKE ASSAULT CHARGE

No Witness Saw Quarrel Between Three, and Stories of Two Sides Differ Widely.

Washington, Ga., November 1.—(Special.)—A difficulty said to have been the outgrowth of testimony furnished by F. M. Combs to the coroner's jury which charged Dr. J. G. Saggus, of Harlem, Ga., in June, with the double murder of his first wife and the former husband of his present wife.

Mrs. Saggus used a 32-caliber pistol, inflicting a painful though not necessarily serious wound in Mr. Combs' left leg, the ball entering just below the hip and lodging against the bone. So far as could be learned here this afternoon there were no eye-witnesses to the affair other than Dr. Saggus and his wife and Mr. Combs.

The two sides of the case to how the difficulty was started. Immediately following the shooting Dr. Saggus and Mrs. Saggus drove to Washington, where warrants charging assault on Mrs. Saggus and assault with intent to kill Dr. Saggus were issued against Combs.

The doctor and his wife had left Washington for their home in Harlem before Mr. Combs was brought here for medical attention.

Combs' Version. According to Combs' version of the difficulty, Dr. Saggus and his wife came to Tyrone, in Wilkes county, today "looking for trouble."

They claimed that their visit had to do with certain land interests that the Harlem physician still holds in this county and were here to adjust with their tenants' certain divisions of crops.

Meeting Mr. Combs in the road near Tyrone this afternoon, Dr. Saggus is said to have gotten out of his car and accused Mr. Combs of having sworn "to a damn lie" concerning the circumstances attending the trial of Dr. Saggus.

It was largely the testimony of Mr. Combs before a special Wilkes county coroner's jury in June that resulted in a charge of double poisoning being lodged against Dr. Saggus. Dr. Saggus was "leashed after ten days in jail here when the state chemist failed to find sufficient strychnine poisoning in the viscera of his first wife and in the body of Charles Wilbanks, first husband of the present Mrs. Saggus, to have produced death.

SHORTAGE IN GOLF FUNDS IS CHARGED TO PROFESSIONAL

Investigation of Records of C. H. House, in Charge of Course at City Stockade, Is Ordered.

ATLANTA DETECTIVES ASKED TO FIND HIM

Chairman of Committee Reports to Park Board That He Has Been Unable to Interview House.

Prosecution of C. H. House, golf professional in charge of the Key golf course at the city stockade, was ordered Wednesday afternoon by the park board, after hearing a report of his alleged irregularities in the handling of fees collected from patrons of the links.

What the alleged shortage amounts to the board was unable to say. The special committee that called on House for an accounting of his receipts reported that he could produce no records of tickets sold and money received. Since he was employed last spring he has turned into the city only about $400, it was said.

Change Is Made. Until a month ago supervision of the links was in the hands of the park commission, when council transferred jurisdiction to the park department, and at the same time asked the park board to check up on receipts from the course.

A special committee was appointed composed of Commissioners Henry Garrett, L. L. Wallis and Councilman Horace Russell. They immediately called on House and since that time receipts have averaged $40 a week, it is stated.

Several recent efforts by the chairman of the committee to see House in pursuit of further investigation have met with failure, he said Wednesday, and he finally asked the detective department to locate him.

Complaints have reached the park department, it was disclosed at the meeting, that the young professional sold four season tickets at $10 each, did not turn the money in and did not issue the tickets.

Employed by Key. House was employed as professional at the stockade course by Mayor Key, according to Commissioner Henry Garrett, who presided as president pro tem.

"He's the boy the mayor wanted to place in charge of the Key and the Piedmont park links," he said, "and when the park board would not consent got mad and hasn't attended a meeting since."

After lengthy discussion Councilman Russell moved that the city attorney be instructed to prosecute the young man. His motion carried unanimously.

Young Girl Found In Pitiful State, After Abduction

Man Is Arrested Following Frightful Crime Against 11-Year-Old Girl.

Grand Rapids, Mich., November 1.—Ramond Eugene Wilson was arrested here tonight for investigation in connection with the abduction in Muskegon Sunday of 11-year-old Rosalie Shanty, who was found in the woods of Manistee county last night in a serious condition from exposure. Wilson's description, police said, tallied with that of the man who enticed the child into an automobile as she emerged from a Muskegon church and drove out of the city with her, against her protests.

Widow of Slain Rector Submits to Questioning

Cross-Examined by Reporters, Asserts Innocence

BY WILL JOHNSON. New Brunswick, N. J., November 1.—The amazing case of Mrs. Edward Wheeler Hall, wife of the pastor slain in the Hall-Mills murder mystery here seven weeks ago, "is in the hands of the jury." To all intents and purposes this hitherto silent figure in the dramatic murder labyrinth has been placed on trial, "has taken the stand in her own defense"—and the people are left to judge.

Probably never before in American history has there been a parallel of the proceedings which came to a climax here Wednesday afternoon when Mrs. Hall submitted to a battery of questions from reporters regarding her place in the mysterious crime.

Behind the veil of insinuations, charges and alleged clues, public opinion long ago fixed upon the widow the role of defendant in the shocking murder of her husband and his choir singer sweetheart, Mrs. Eleanor Mills. Then, out of the mystery and muck of an alleged investigation of many weeks, there suddenly appeared the figure of one "Mrs. Gibson"—a hog raiser. She declared she saw the murder committed.

Public opinion decreed that the "case of the prosecution" was complete. The "trial" was called. Mrs. Gibson "took the stand"—in the press. Questioned for days by reporters she testified to a lurid story of exactly how the murder was committed and ended by defying Mrs. Hall—in the newspapers—to face her with a denial that Mrs. Hall was present when her husband was murdered.

The "prosecution rested." Public opinion demanded that Mrs. Hall "take the stand in her own defense." So, in the front parlor of the stately Stevens mansion, with its old-fashioned furnishings, eloquent of the home life of Rev. Hall, the slain pastor's widow Wednesday faced an audience of 30 newspapermen and maintained her absolute innocence of the murder.

Submitting for nearly an hour to severe cross-examination on every phase of the mystery of her life with Dr. Hall, and of the romance of the pastor and his alleged choir girl sweetheart, Mrs. Hall maintained in perturbed composure throughout the ordeal.

Had it not been for the homely furnishings of the room, quaint knick-knacks on the mantle, an old-fashioned clock, the scene might have been that of a drawing room.

Death Is Sudden Of Thomas Nelson Page, Virginian

Famous Diplomat, Lawyer and Author Passes Away at Plantation Home.

Richmond, Va., November 1.—Thomas Nelson Page, lawyer, diplomat and author, dropped dead of heart failure at 1:20 o'clock this afternoon, while walking in the garden of his old plantation home, "Oakland," in Hanover county.

Mr. Page, apparently in the best of health, was walking in the garden with his sister-in-law, Mrs. Rosewell Page, when he suddenly collapsed. He was carried into the house and medical aid was hastily summoned, but the distinguished statesman was found to be beyond the assistance of human agencies. He died within a few minutes.

Mr. Page had apparently enjoyed the best of health in recent months and his sudden death came as a shock to Virginia and the nation. About a month ago he came to Virginia to spend the winter at the old home near Reaver Dam with his brother's family. He announced that he would soon begin the preparation of a book dealing with his experiences as a diplomat in the service of his country as ambassador to Italy during the trying days of the world war.

He descended from one of Virginia's first families. Mr. Page was one of the Old Dominion's first citizens. His father and mother were both descendants of General Thomas Nelson, one of the signers of the declaration of independence.

NEGRO CONFESSES TO SHOOTING DOWN GEORGE COCHRAN

Declares, However, That He Did Not Enter Store to Rob, But Used Pistol After Row Over Change.

NEGRO NOW SERVING TERM ON CHAINGANG

David Hudson Will Be Brought Back to Atlanta at Once and Put on Trial Within Two Weeks.

Clearing up what was considered one of the most baffling murder mysteries in recent years in Atlanta, David Hudson, a negro, who formerly worked as a cook in a luncheonette at 7 Auburn avenue, has confessed to the slaying of George Cochran, local merchant, in his store at Edgewood avenue and Butler street, on Saturday night, October 1, 1921, it was learned Wednesday.

Hudson is now serving time on the chaingang for robbing a Decatur street pawnshop. Following his conviction in Fulton superior court and sentence to the Fulton chaingang he was transferred to the Cook county chaingang.

Pleemie Miner, investigator for Solicitor John A. Boykin, and City Detective Sturdivant and Campbell left Atlanta Monday for Adel, Ga., where the negro was working on the chaingang. After securing a full confession to the crime Tuesday morning they returned to Atlanta Tuesday night.

Denies Trying to Rob. According to the officers, the negro denied that he shot Cochran in an attempt to rob his store, as was reported to the police at the time. Hudson claims that he got into an argument with the merchant over some change when he went into the store to purchase something to smoke.

Hudson lived at 320 Auburn avenue. His sentence for the pawnshop robbery is from eight to twelve years. The killing occurred at the time the killing was coping with a series of daring holdups. On the night Cochran was killed the dry goods store of C. M. Cohen, at 315 Edgewood avenue, was entered by three negro bandits, and five clerks were lined up at the points of pistols while the cash register was robbed of $50. They robbed Cochran about 8 o'clock.

Cochran Is Shot. About 11:30 o'clock Cochran, who operated a soda, cigar and fruit store in partnership with Charlie Cochran, was shot in the presence of a negro employee. The employee was arrested the following day on suspicion and later released.

Cochran was taken to Grady hospital, one block away, but he died without regaining consciousness. The bullet had penetrated his brain. Pleemie Miner and Detective Sturdivant and Campbell followed the clue for more than one year in partnership with Charlie Cochran. Learning that Hudson had admitted to the convict warden at Adel that he had some knowledge of the affair, Miner and the city officers were at once sent to question him. We confronted he readily admitted the act, it is said.

Hudson will be indicted by the Fulton grand jury within the next two weeks, it was stated. Meanwhile, he will continue to serve his sentence in Cook county.

100 Per Cent Candidate Wearing Out Hands Writing Checks.

BY PAUL STEVENSON. As the day for the general election Tuesday, November 7, approaches, excitement in Georgia over the race of Andy Gump for congress has increased to such a degree that street corner arguments, high school debates, political betting pools and even fist fights over the Gump candidacy are seen on every side. HARDWICK CALLS FOR PRISON CAMP PROBE IN GEORGIA Action Is Taken After Many Complaints of Inhumane Treatment of Convicts Are Received.

PRISON CAMP REFORM PROGRAM IS APPROVED

Committee on Church Cooperation Is Pushing Changes That Will Revolutionize Conduct of Camps.

Governor Hardwick, Wednesday, informed the committee on church co-operation that he will immediately urge the state prison commission to conduct a rigid investigation of charges in numerous instances that prisoners in Georgia prison camps are brutally flogged and are given inhumane treatment.

Charles N. Walker, spokesman for the committee, who presented the matter to the governor in behalf of the churches body, at the same time announced that the governor has approved a program of prison camp reforms that will revolutionize the system of corporal punishment now in vogue and will insure fair and humane treatment to all convicts.

This program is being drawn up by officials of the committee, Mr. Walker stated, and will be presented to the governor in a few days. He declared that no extra legislation will be necessary to carry the new system into effect, but that it will be inaugurated by instructions of the prison commission from the governor, who is empowered by law to regulate prison affairs.

Features of Program. Chief features of the new program will be as follows:

Written reports from prison camp officials of instances of misconduct on the part of prisoners, these to be filed with the prison commission. Review of the facts so detailed by the commission, and formal decision as to the form of punishment to be administered.

In case of a decision to administer corporal punishment, the prisoner convicted of misconduct shall be whipped by a prison camp official who in all cases shall not be the man who filed the complaint against the prisoner.

Presence of a physician at the time of each whipping in order that prisoners may be properly attended in case of ill physical effects. The governor, Wednesday, stated that he will ask the prison commission to make a complete and far-reaching investigation of prison camp conditions, and to institute reforms wherever they are found—cessary.

Wants Thorough Probe. The governor told the committee that there had been so many reports of inhumane treatment to prisoners coming to his desk that he had decided to ask the prison commission to make a thorough investigation of conditions and to investigate each particular complaint. Among the complaints the one received most frequently is that wardens flog prisoners for insubordination and other offenses, and that they exceed the authority given them by law in such cases. The charges of inhumane treatment

MINISTER-SLAYER WILL NOT APPEAL CASE, HE ASSERTS

"I Am Well Satisfied," Said Young Slayer of His Mother-in-Law in Court.

PADRICK IN PRAYER AS JURY DELIBERATED

Parents Sit With Young Minister to Hear Fate at Close of Dramatic Trial.

Statesboro, Ga., November 1. (Special.)—A verdict of guilty with recommendation for mercy was returned by the jury late this afternoon in the case of Rev. Elliott Padrick, young Methodist preacher, who went on trial Monday for the murder of his mother-in-law, Mrs. Mamie Lou Dixon. Judge J. B. Park immediately sentenced the minister to life imprisonment.

Complete satisfaction with the verdict and the sentence was expressed by young Padrick as he was led from the court by Sheriff Joe Tillman to begin his long jail term. "I will not appeal, he said. "I am well satisfied with the verdict."

A feeling of relief seemed to come to the youth. The jury returned to the courtroom at 6:30 o'clock this evening, after having taken the case at 11 o'clock Tuesday night. They had deliberated, however, only since 9 o'clock this morning. Judge Park having instructed the twelve men to give the case no consideration until after a night's rest when he charged them at the close of the arguments last night.

Foreman J. L. Brannon presented the verdict after the jurors had filed into the courtroom and taken their seats in the box. An expectant crowd was gathered. Tense silence prevailed as the foreman read the verdict to R. Lee Moore, who directed the prosecution. He began: "We, the jury, find the prisoner guilty."

For the first time since the slaying of his mother-in-law and pretty young wife, young Padrick's face took on a tense look. It was quickly followed by one of noticeable relief, however, as he stood up to hear Judge Park sentence him to imprisonment for life.

With a very pleased look on his face, he turned to Sheriff Tillman and was led back to his cell. Attorneys for the young slayer, in their closing speeches, asked for nothing better than a verdict providing for life imprisonment, pleading with the jury not to "hang a crazy man."

While the jury was deliberating upon his fate, young Padrick was occupying his time in prayer. He went to his knees immediately after entering the courtroom. A moment later his mother walked into the room and kissed him. During the morning she sat with her son, her head bowed in her hands in prayer. His father also sat with the young defendant. This was the first time that Padrick's parent sat with him since the trial began.

Padrick seemed fresh and alert as he entered the courtroom with a

MISS MATTIE MORRIS WILL ASK NEW TRIAL

A motion for a new trial for Miss Mattie Morris, pretty young Atlanta woman, who was convicted in United States district court and sentenced Wednesday by Judge Sibley to a term of thirteen months in the federal school of correction for females at Warrenville, will be filed by Attorney Frank Doughman, counsel for the defendant, this week, it was intimated yesterday.

Miss Morris was found guilty of possessing a small quantity of opium, which she claimed was the property of W. H. Fitzsimmons, who jumped from the window of a downtown hotel several months ago and committed suicide.

The business connection of men applying for commissions in the United States army range from school teachers to wrestling instructors.

She admitted on the stand that she had become addicted to the use of narcotics because of her ill health, and pleaded with Judge Sibley not to send her to the school of correction, but to a sanitarium to be cured of the "dope" habit.

Luther Glor, alleged to have been implicated in the recent robbery of the John B. Daniel drug store in which a large quantity of morphine and other narcotics were stolen, pleaded guilty to possessing 40 grains of morphine and was sentenced to serve six months in jail or an alternative of $250 fine.

No Developments Have Come as Result of His Visit to Atlanta, Says Harry Gamble.

No action has been taken by Harry Gamble, of New Orleans, attorney representing Mrs. Onessa de Bouchelle, former fiancée of Asa G. "No developments have come as a result of my visit to Atlanta for publication," Mr. Gamble said. "There is absolutely nothing to be given out by us at this time."

According to discussion in legal circles it is expected that Mr. Gamble is preparing to file suit against Mr. Candler in behalf of his client. Just now much in damages will be sought and just when the actual legal proceedings will be instituted could not be learned from Mr. Gamble Wednesday.

Mr. Gamble will remain in Atlanta at least through Thursday and possibly longer.

POLICE DOUBT STORY ABOUT LITTLE BABY

All Efforts to Find Girl Who Brought Child to Hospital Fail.

Master Four-week-old "Blank" who landed in the Grady hospital Monday afternoon from police station, where he was carried by a young woman who gave her name as Miss Mildred Ford, of Columbus, Ga., Wednesday seemed perfectly happy as he tugged at the covering upon the little bed which he occupied in the infant ward.

Policewoman Mrs. W. W. Evans, detailed by Chief Beavers to investigate the story of the young girl, Wednesday expressed doubt as to the truth of her story.

Upon bringing the child to police station Monday afternoon the girl told Police Chief Beavers that an unidentified man on the train en route to Atlanta from Covington had placed the child in her lap, with a request that she try to quiet it for him; that he walked to the rear of the coach and disappeared to be seen no more by her.

She also claimed that the conductor on the train told her to turn the little fellow over to the Atlanta police. Conductors of the two Georgia railroad afternoon trains have denied knowing anything about the alleged abandonment.

The story told by Miss Ford that she was a student of the Girls' Normal and Industrial college, at Milledgeville, is now being investigated by the police, who are also in communication with authorities of Muscogee county and Columbus, determined to find out more concerning the identity of the child.

HALLOWEEN BANDIT SOUGHT BY POLICE

Police Wednesday were without any clues to the bandit who, Tuesday night, taking advantage of the wearing of masks by Halloween merry-makers, disguised himself and walking into the Inman Park delicatessen, at 152 Moreland avenue, rifled the cash register of approximately $20 in money, while he held the clerk, Victor Calocouras, at bay with an automatic pistol.

A large crowd was just outside of the store at the time of the daring robbery. They were all-garbed in various kinds of paraphernalia and masked, and it was at first thought by those within hearing of the bandit's voice that it was only a joke. They quickly understood the situation, however, when the bandit robbed the cash register. He left in a high-powered automobile that was left outside with the motor running and a confederate at the steering wheel. The machine, police were told, had no license tag.

ONE BILLION DOLLARS MORE MONEY IN SOUTH

Ernest Dallis Makes Interesting Address Before the Lions' Club.

Farmers of the south this year have $1,000,000,000 more purchasing power than last year, in the opinion of Ernest E. Dallis, nationally known advertising man, who made this statement in an address at the Lions' club luncheon, Wednesday. Mr. Dallis is a member of the firm of Johnson-Dallis Advertising agency, and is secretary of the American Association of Advertising Agencies.

Mr. Dallis' address was a brief review of a talk made by him before the national convention of the advertising agency association in New York. Through presentation of figures representing value of products grown in the south, taking ten principal crops and comparing these with the cost of production this year with a similar comparison for last year, Mr. Dallis established the point that the south is the ideal section for the national advertiser to increase sales efforts.

Dr. Murray Haire presided at the luncheon and Edward Bond made a short talk on the coming of the Elks' grand lodge to Atlanta next July. It was decided to hold the weekly luncheon of the club on Tuesday, second floor of the chamber of commerce building, instead of on Wednesday as has been the custom for some time.

MUSIC TEACHERS WILL CONVENE IN ATLANTA

The first annual convention of the Southern Supervisors' Conference of Music for Public School Teachers will be held in Atlanta December 14 to 16, inclusive, it was announced from the Atlanta Convention bureau Wednesday. Several hundred delegates are expected to attend this conference and the convention bureau is taking an active part in securing a record attendance for the meeting.

Miss Kate Lee Haralson, superintendent of music for the public schools of Atlanta, informed the convention bureau that Atlanta had been selected for the meeting in preference to both Birmingham, Ala., and Cleveland, Tenn. It is stated that much of the credit for getting this convention for Atlanta is due Miss Haralson.

Paul J. Weaver, Chapel Hill, N. C., is the president of the organization and the states having members are Virginia, West Virginia, Tennessee, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Arkansas, Oklahoma, Texas, Louisiana, Mississippi and Kentucky.

FORMER MAYOR OF GADSDEN HERE VISITING BROTHER

Former Mayor Clyde A. Stevenson, of Gadsden, Ala., one of the leading citizens of that community, arrived in Atlanta Wednesday on a visit to his brother, Paul Stevenson, Atlanta newspaperman.

Mr. Stevenson's tenure of office as mayor of the Alabama city expired October 1, of this year, and he is arranging plans for re-entering business in Gadsden, where he has been located for the past twenty years. He is accompanied by his wife to Atlanta.

SHOP MACHINIST'S AUTO DYNAMITED

Waycross Shaken by Blast in Front of Home of Railway Shopman.

Waycross, Ga., November 1.—(Special.)—A Ford truck belonging to W. L. Dutton, a machinist employed by the Atlantic Coast Line railroad at the local shops, was dynamited at an early hour this morning by unknown parties.

The truck was parked in front of Mr. Dutton's home on Madison avenue in Glendale park when the explosion occurred. Local police believe that the dynamite was thrown under the car by some one passing in another automobile, and that the explosive had a time fuse attached to it. It is also believed that the dynamite was intended to be planted in the car, but the dynamite in his haste missed his aim. The explosion, which totally wrecked the car, was heard in all parts of the city. Windows were shaken blocks away from the scene of the explosion, but Mr. and Mrs. Dutton, who were asleep in the house, escaped uninjured.

Dutton remained at work when the strike was called off July 1, and has retained his position ever since. This is the first dynamiting case in Waycross since September 20, when the house of a negro workman was dynamited by an explosive, the composition of which was never discovered.

FATHER TO BRING TWO YOUTHS BACK TO FACE SHORTAGE

Hubert Puckett, 14, of 90 Dodd avenue, and Victor Palmer, 16, of 85 Dodd avenue, charged with absconding with approximately $2,500 belonging to Southern railway shopmen here, are expected to reach Atlanta from Anniston, Ala., during the night Wednesday, when they will be in charge of C. O. Puckett, father of Hubert, who was commissioned a special officer for the purpose of bringing them back.

After obtaining the money in checks endorsed by the shopmen, the boys are alleged to have purchased a new touring car. It was this machine that they were driving without a license, and that brought about their arrest by the Anniston authorities. Their suspicious actions then led the authorities there to hold them for further investigation.

The Palmer boys, according to shop employees, had been cashing thousands of dollars worth of checks for them for more than a year and they had implicit confidence in him. The Puckett boy is said to have been helping Palmer for several weeks.

The boys' mothers, Mrs. V. J. Palmer and Mrs. C. O. Puckett, attribute their sons' plight to bad influences of older persons, whose identity has not been learned.

P. P. JACKSON IS SUE FOR $15,000 DAMAGES

P. P. Jackson, local professional bondsman, was made defendant in a $15,000 damage suit filed in Fulton superior court Wednesday by S. E. Perkerson, plaintiff in recent criminal charges made against the bondsman, who charges Jackson with having falsely imprisoned him. Perkerson is represented by Attorney Reuben A. Garland.

It is alleged that Perkerson, after paying Jackson to sign a $500 bond for his release from jail, Jackson surrendered him to jail again. Jackson is now under bond for alleged violation of the law governing the practice of professional bondsmen.

Perkerson was arrested early in September for reckless driving. On September 28, it is said, he engaged Jackson to bail him out, paying him $50 to sign a $500 bond. On October 4, it is claimed, Jackson remanded Perkerson to the custody of the jailer. Later Perkerson, through Attorney Garland, pleaded guilty to the reckless driving charge and paid a fine of $25.

Perkerson then took out a warrant against Jackson, charging that he had exacted an extortionate and illegal fee, and that when Jackson surrendered him he refused to return the $50 bond fee. Jackson fought the charges, attacking the constitutionality of the law governing bondsmen, but was bound over and will later face trial.

Alston Indorsed For United States Supreme Court

Resolutions Asking for His Appointment Sent to Pres- ident Harding.

Copies of resolutions adopted by the Atlanta Bar association Wednesday strongly indorsing Robert C. Alston, prominent Atlanta attorney, for appointment to the United States supreme court bench, were forwarded to President Harding and Attorney-General Daugherty in Washington Wednesday night.

Earlier in the day Senator W. J. Harris, who is in the city, sent a telegram of indorsement to President Harding, and Walter O. Foote, president of the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce, sent a similar message to the president through Hoke Smith, former senator.

The resolutions adopted by the local bar association were drafted by Sanders Daniel and Samuel N. Evans, and declared that Mr. Alston has achieved a notable success in the courts, both state and federal, and has through ability, perseverance, industry and upright conduct secured a place of conspicuous eminence among the members of the legal profession of the south as that his distinction as a lawyer is recognized throughout the entire country.

In addition to his legal parts, he possesses wide general learning and culture, coupled with mental discrimination, with breadth of vision, loftiness of character and painstaking energy. The resolutions further combine to fit him peculiarly for judicial work of the highest order, and is now in the very prime of mental and physical vigor.

A new judge is to be appointed to the supreme court bench to succeed Justice William R. Day, who recently resigned.

of a fugitive. They also found by an imprint on the log that a man had sat on the log for a brief moment.

Check of Traffic.

A check of traffic on the road which goes through the Morning creek section, on which the postman met his death, was made Wednesday night. The fact that no one was seen to go in the direction of the point where the killing occurred, between 9 o'clock Saturday morning and the time the body was discovered, the perpetrators of the crime are believed to have been in that locality prior to 9 o'clock.

"It is our opinion that two men were waiting for Langston at the roadside," said Detective Adams, "and when he drove up they engaged him in conversation, striking him from the rear when he was of his guard."

Arthur Alexander, who lives about a mile from the home of Charlie Waller, and who was placed in the Fayette county jail Tuesday night in connection with another case, was questioned closely by the ax murder probes Wednesday.

Alexander is said to have admitted that he was at the home of Charlie Waller about 11 o'clock on the morning of the slaying. Although he claims that he left for his own home at that time and stayed at home for the remainder of the day, detectives stated that Thursday morning they will question a witness who is said to have seen Alexander reach College Park in an automobile in company with three other men, one being the man who spent Friday night at the Waller home, at about noon Saturday.

Looking for Buggy.

Efforts were being made Wednesday to establish the identity of the occupant of a buggy which was noticed following the postman on the day of his death. Persons who saw the buggy state the vehicle and the mule drawing it belonged to John Waller, but they are unable to furnish a clear description of the buggy's occupant.

It has been learned, it is said, that the buggy followed Langston's machine to within a quarter of a mile of the place where he was slain.

Several inconsistencies in the alibis of the men under suspicion were foisted Wednesday, according to W. R. Adams.

"A most peculiar thing about this case is the fact that the party even intimately connected with the matter readily offered a complete narrative of his movements on Saturday," he said, "and when we questioned them about what they did on the day before they could not recall anything about their actions on that day."

"I am convinced that the alibis were premeditated and planned. Except in a few cases they are perfect," Charlie Waller is said to have proven a satisfactory alibi. He told investigators that he left for Atlanta at 3 o'clock Saturday morning to peddle a wagon load of produce and was not return home until nearly dark.

LEON HOLCOMBE WEDS MISS MARY LIVINGSTON

Leon Holcombe, Atlanta business man, was married Wednesday night to Miss Mary Livingston, of Fitzgerald, Ga. The ceremony took place at the home of the groom's sister at 158 Hopkins street, at 7 o'clock in the evening. Rev. R. M. Stinson officiated.

The bride was dressed in blue tulle with cut steel beads. She wore a corsage of bridal roses, and a swansona. The home was decorated with a profusion of cut flowers.

The couple left Wednesday for Chattanooga, the first stop on their honeymoon, which will include a trip to Canada. The bride's only attendant was Helen Andrus, of Thomasville, Ga.

As while early rumors in the afternoon indicated that the jury was deadlocked as to whether the defendant should be hanged or given a prison sentence, the crowd about the courtroom began to increase to hear the verdict and sentence.

The youthful defendant from the time the jury was locked up at 9 o'clock last night, displayed little or no interest in affairs about him. While engaged in his prayers as the jury deliberated, he showed no sign of despair, though he was more watchful than during the trial proceedings.

Padrick had been on trial for the murder of his mother-in-law, Mrs. Mamie Lee Dixon, who was shot to death by him at the same time the jury took their case.

Active After Raid.

According to information gathered from residents of the community where Charlie Waller lives by Sheriff Kerlin and Deputy Sheriff Turner, of Fayette county, and the private detectives, Waller became very active the day following the still raid in an effort to ascertain who had been in the vicinity the day previous to the raid.

Witnesses state, according to the investigators, that Waller had made numerous inquiries in an attempt to learn who had furnished the information which brought about the moonshine raid by Sheriff T. C. Kerlin and Federal Prohibition Agent T. B. Harris.

Waller is said to have declared that if he ever learned who had reported the still the party would never report another.

Cause of the recent burning of a negro's barn in the vicinity of the killing was being probed Wednesday. A negro recently rented a place in the Waller community and had moved part of his goods into the barn from his previous domicile, it is said. Before he could complete the removal of his household to the new place the barn and its contents was mysteriously destroyed by fire. The negro, it is stated, did not carry in the cash, but took his wife and children to another settlement. It is believed in Fayetteville that the barn was burned to intimidate the family. The burning occurred shortly after the raid, it is said.

springing stride. Asked if he thought he had been given a fair trial, he replied:

"I don't know; I haven't heard the verdict yet."

The jury took the case at the close of one of the most dramatic trials in the history of Georgia courts. The remarkable defense of Padrick in a sermon to the jury was the stranger ever heard in this court, and attendees at the trial were divided today as to whether the sermon was an indication of insanity or denoted striking intelligence.

But throughout the jury's deliberations sentiment seemed to be generally fixed that a verdict of acquittal was very unlikely. It was the general belief that the prisoner would be found guilty, with a few expecting recommendation for mercy.

Judge Park, in his charge to the jury the night before told the 12 men that should there be any doubt in their minds of Padrick's sanity at the time of the killing a verdict of acquittal should be given, but if his sanity was unquestioned, he should be found guilty, with or without recommendation.

The officers were installed immediately after their election by Past Master George Napier.

Badges of honor for 25 years service in the grand lodge were awarded to W. P. McCutcheon, of Franklin; W. A. Simmons, of Kingston; and R. B. Seagraves, of Bolton, by Thomas H. Jeffries, of Atlanta, past grand master.

At the meeting of the Macon home trustees Dr. E. L. Merrell of Turin, Ga., was elected superintendent of the home for the aged, to succeed Peter V. Rice, resigned.

It was shown by T. J. Carling, chairman of the finance committee, in making reports to the grand lodge, that the general fund amounted to $89,125.

ATHENS NEWS PASSES TO RECEIVER'S HANDS

Athens, Ga., November 1.—(Special.)—The Athens Daily News, for which a receiver was appointed by Judge Walter L. Hodges, of the northern circuit of the superior court, Athens has again lived up to a reputation which it has had for many years of being a "newspaper graveyard."

In the past years more newspapers have sprung up in Athens, only to be suspended or forced to consolidate, than any other city in Georgia, among some of those either suspended or consolidated being The Call, The Southern Field, The Tribune, The Ledger, The Graphic, The Chronicle, The Watchman, and the latest, The Athens Daily News.

With Atlanta and Macon newspapers on one hand, and newspapers from South Carolina on the other, only one daily newspaper has managed to tide the stormy years. The Athens Banner, which last year, when it was 90 years old, moved to the Athens Herald, forming The Banner-Herald, which today publishes morning and afternoon issues.

WAREHOUSE BURNS

Athens, Ga., November 1.—(Special.)—A cotton seed warehouse, owned by J. E. Griffin, of Colbert, Ga., on the Seaboard railroad, burned Wednesday night with a loss of about $5,000. One Athens fire company was called out and arrived in the Madison county town in time to prevent the spreading of the flames to four other adjoining warehouses.

The youthful defendant from the time the jury was locked up at 9 o'clock last night, displayed little or no interest in affairs about him. While engaged in his prayers as the jury deliberated, he showed no sign of despair, though he was more watchful than during the trial proceedings.

Padrick had been on trial for the murder of his mother-in-law, Mrs. Mamie Lee Dixon, who was shot to death by him at the same time the jury took their case.

As while early rumors in the afternoon indicated that the jury was deadlocked as to whether the defendant should be hanged or given a prison sentence, the crowd about the courtroom began to increase to hear the verdict and sentence.

NOV. 11 PROCLAIMED "ARMISTICE DAY" BY THE GOVERNOR

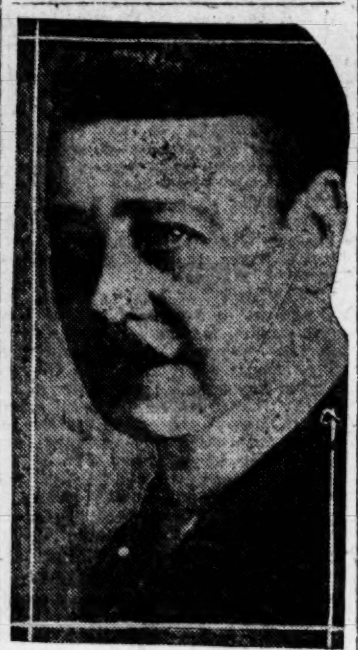

November 11 will be observed in Georgia as "Armistice day," according to a proclamation issued Wednesday by Governor Thomas W. Hardwick. The governor asks all Georgians to observe the day with fitting ceremonies to mark the satisfaction of the people at the ending of the recent world war.

Following is the proclamation: Whereas, on November 11, 1918, the armistice was signed in the great world war; and Whereas, the anniversary of that day now approaches. Now, therefore, I, Thomas W. Hardwick, governor of Georgia, do issue this, my proclamation setting apart Saturday, November 11, 1922, as Armistice day and urge upon all patriotic societies and upon all citizens the proper and fitting observance of that day, especially urging that the people assemble at 11 o'clock a. m., on said day, in their respective communities, for a moment of solemn thanksgiving for the victory of the allied armies in that great war, and in reverent memory of those American soldiers who gave the supreme proof of their patriotism and made the supreme sacrifice in that fierce struggle.

WILTON LACKAYE APPEARS TONIGHT IN "THE CIRCLE"

Wilton Lackaye, with "The Circle," which tonight starts an engagement of three nights and matinees at the Atlanta theater, has been the most sought-for actor of the present year. Mr. Lackaye's services have been in constant demand by managers who wanted to cast their attractions with talent that theatergoers appreciated, hence Mr. Lackaye created new roles this season in "The Gold Fish" now playing New York, and in "The Monster," which engagements he was compelled to give up on account of his contract with the Selwyns to appear on tour with the all-star cast of "The Circle."

This popular and versatile actor is well remembered by playgoers, for his many character creations on the American stage and his "Svengali" in "Tribe," will go down in theatrical history as a work of art.

Mr. Lackaye also scored a tremendous success in "The Children of the Ghetto," and the long run of this play and its popularity was mostly due to the magnificent performance given by Mr. Lackaye. Another success that was made famous through his efforts was "The Pit," which ran for several seasons in New York and on tour and critics throughout the United States were unanimous in their praise of Mr. Lackaye's work.

In "The Circle" Mr. Lackaye has the role of Lord Porteous—just the sort of a character that gives this excellent actor an opportunity to display his very best efforts and local theatergoers have a rare treat in store for them.

FROST WILL BE LATER THAN YEARLY AVERAGE

More Rain, With Temperature About the Same, Predicted for Today.

More rain with no great drop in temperature is the weather forecast for Thursday. It is practically certain that no killing frost will visit Atlanta this year as early as the average date, November 6, in the opinion of Meteorologist C. E. von Herrmann, of the local weather bureau office.

"There must be cold weather in other parts of the country before we can expect any here," said Mr. von Herrmann, "and even if cold weather now existed in the northwest and north, we couldn't expect it to reach here by November 6, thus it is certain that killing frost this year will be later than the average date. No cold weather is obtaining in any of the sections as yet to indicate that a frost will come. After weather conditions in the northwest become such as to indicate a cold wave for Atlanta, then it will require some days for it to reach here."

Rainfall in Atlanta was light Wednesday, only a fraction of an inch being recorded, and Mr. von Herrmann stated that fair weather would probably come Thursday morning.

Growers of tomatoes and other late crops, stated Mr. von Herrmann, will no doubt be able to wait until ripening before harvesting, and the late fall is very favorable to sweet potato fields and sugar cane.

The British house of parliament covers an area of eight acres and has a river frontage of 940 feet. They contain more than 500 rooms and about eighteen residences, the resident population being about 200.

BISHOP OF TENNESSEE SPEAKS AT CATHEDRAL

Four Days' Celebration of 75th Anniversary Comes to Close.

The seventy-fifth anniversary of St. Philip's Cathedral closed Wednesday evening with evening services at which the preacher was the Rt. Rev. Thomas F. Gallor, bishop of Tennessee, president of the National council and head of the Episcopal church in the United States.

"The church has never considered doctrine more important than life," Bishop Gallor said. "During the sixteenth century when the reformers were making the statement of religious belief the test of faith, the English church did not require that her followers adopt a mechanical theological system."

"However, I would be the last one to sympathize with the modern optimists, who believe in everything in general and in nothing in particular in their stand against creeds. If we have intellect, we must have a creed. The creed is the intellectual expression of our faith."

"All men, everywhere, have had religion. It is a part of the life of the human and no change or institution can take it away. Christ came to interpret and answer the questions that arose in the minds of those who yearned after God. It is the work of the church to bring to man the sense of sonship of man to God."

Glad to Take Part. Bishop Gallor said he was glad to have a part in the celebration of the cathedral's anniversary and the anniversary of Bishop McKelvey's consecration because of his interest in Bishop McKelvey and his work. Before his consecration five years ago, Bishop McKelvey was rector of Christ church, Nashville, in Bishop Gallor's charge. Bishop Gallor presided at Bishop McKelvey's consecration, which was in St. Philip's cathedral.

Following the sermon Dean Thomas H. Johnston, dean of the cathedral, made a short address thanking all who had assisted in making the seventy-fifth anniversary the success it was. In the procession were all members of the cathedral chapter, led by Robert H. Alston, chancellor of the diocese, wearing an Oxford gown and the scarlet hood of a doctor of civil law. Following were fifteen clergymen. Then came the chaplain to the bishop of Atlanta and Bishop McKelvey. The Rev. C. C. Richardson, rector of the Church of the Incarnation, was master of ceremonies.

Reception is Given. At a reception Tuesday evening in the chapter house of the cathedral, the cathedral parish were hosts at a reception for all guests at the seventy-fifth anniversary. As it was the eve of All Saints' day, the fifth anniversary of the consecration of the bishop of Atlanta, he was presented with a handsome silver coffee urn by members of the cathedral chapter.

At 10:30 o'clock on Wednesday morning, All Saints' day, Bishop McKelvey celebrated holy communion at St. Philip's. He ordained to the diaconate Charles McKinley, and elevated to the priesthood the Rev. Frank Parker. The Rev. Mr. McKinley will be in charge of the parish at Washington, Ga., and Dr. Parker will remain at St. Philip's cathedral where he has been for the past two years.

Prove splendid laxative properties of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin by test

SCIENTIFIC test has now proven what Dr. Caldwell of Monticello asserted many years ago, that constipation will slow you up fully 25 per cent. The test was made by Dr. Donaldson of Loma Linda upon four men in the prime of life who deliberately went without a bowel movement for four days.

Within 48 hours the men had coated tongue and foul breath, cankers in the mouth, no appetite, restless sleep, indigestion, headache, depression, nervousness, cramps. The blood pressure was up 28 per cent. It is just this that Dr. Caldwell has preached to his patients in private and to the public through the printed word ever since he began the practice of his specialty, diseases of the stomach and bowels, back in 1875.

After observing for years the satisfactory effect of his prescription for constipation, he placed it in drug stores in 1892, a simple vegetable compound of Egyptian senna and pepsin with pleasant-tasting aromatics, now known as Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. That was 30 years ago, and today over 10 million bottles are bought annually, the largest selling family laxative in the world. You will find it in any drug store you enter, a generous size bottle costing you less than a cent a dose.

Every member of the family from the infants to the grandparents can use it with safety. It is gentle and mild. The formula is on the package. Mrs. Roy Cook of Bellefontaine, O., has been giving it to her 5-months old baby, who now weighs 19 pounds; and Mr. J. B. Dawson of Brinson, Ga., declares it the best laxative his family has ever found. Try a teaspoonful of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin for constipation or any of its symptoms. The results will delight you. And the cost is only one cent a dose.

It's The Valleys In Paint
That Make It Poor

The Hills are the thick streaks. The Valleys are the thin streaks. PAINT streaks are caused by the brush marks. No matter how much brushing is done, brush marks show in poor paints. Good paint when brushed smooths up level itself. Poor paint won't. It has hills and valleys that are alternately strong and weak.

But as no chain can be stronger than its weakest link, so is no paint any better than its poorest places—its valleys. Most paints are made of only three things. Our High Standard is made of six differing ones.

The last of the six makes the paint smooth itself out to an even uniform thick surface. It's one of the main reasons why it stands wear; why it has such long lastingness. It's sold by the one-best-duster, each town. Send 10c for High Standard paint. You'll find it tried, tested, and guaranteed. No fuss, no hills and valleys.

That Wonderful Feeling When your teeth are lustrous and your mouth is clean BEAUTIFUL, lustrous teeth.

And a mouth that is HYGIENICALLY CLEAN—what greater gift can Nature bestow?

What can be more inspiring and refreshing, as you face the day's duties?

Are you getting that WONDERFUL ENCOURAGEMENT each morning—that SOOTHING COMFORT each night?

For Both Beauty and Health

Old fashioned dentifrices, which simply SCOUR THE TEETH, and particularly those CONTAINING GRIT, have passed into the discard.

Modern dental hygiene demands that the FILM on the teeth be DISSOLVED AND WASHED AWAY.

This film provides breeding places for germs which, unless REMOVED, or RENDERED INACTIVE, form acids that destroy the tooth-enamel.

Millions of dangerous, DECAY-PRODUCING GERMS lurk and multiply in all parts of the mouth—on THE TONGUE and on MOUTH MEMBRANES, as well as on the teeth themselves.

THESE, ALSO, must be DESTROYED and WASHED AWAY, if you are to enjoy that incomparable feeling of being HEALTHFULLY REFRESHED, and if you are permanently to preserve the beautiful, NATURAL LUSTRE of the teeth.

Many VERY INTELLIGENT people, careful TO AN EXTREME about most matters relating to toilet and hygiene, have grown RECKLESSLY CARELESS as to the use of GRIT in brushing their teeth.

Grit Ruins the Enamel

Grit may SCRAPE and GRIND the film from the face of the teeth—so EMERY DUST would scrape the greasy film from a dinner plate. But it is CERTAIN, ALSO, TO SCRAPE AND INJURE THE ENAMEL UNDER THE FILM, just as emery dust would ruin the enamel on the dinner plate.

We have on file in our New Haven laboratories personal applications from over 47,000 American Dentists and 74,000 American Physicians for Kolynos Dental Cream, to distribute among their patients.

Ask your dentist, your physician or your druggist about Kolynos Dental Cream. Get the OPINION OF EXPERTS, and act on it.

And remember that your present set of teeth, as Nature gave them to you, are EXPECTED to endure through old age.

WIFE OF CONGRESSMAN GORDON LEE IS DEAD

End Comes Suddenly at Table Wednesday While Visiting Friends at Newnan.

Newnan, Ga., November 1.—(Special.)—Mrs. Olive Berry Lee, wife of Congressman Gordon Lee, died suddenly at 7:30 o'clock tonight of a paralytic stroke suffered at the supper table at the home of Mrs. Lizzie Bringle, with whom she has been visiting for a week.

Mrs. Lee was apparently in the best of health. Her death comes a shock to hosts of friends here, where she was born and spent her early childhood, as well as to friends throughout the state. The present home is at Chickamauga.

Congressman Lee has been on a fishing trip to Savannah for the past week. Funeral arrangements tonight were incomplete, pending his arrival. However, Mrs. Lee will be buried at Newnan.

Mrs. Lee was a daughter of the late Byrd Berry, former wealthy banker, who was the first male child born at Newnan. She was a sister of the late Judge John Berry, former city judge of Atlanta.

Drastic Changes In Traffic Laws Are Recommended

Committee of Twelve Plans to Bar Parking on Downtown Streets.

Agreement on a number of proposed drastic changes in Atlanta traffic laws was reached by the traffic committee of twelve at city hall Wednesday morning.

The principal revision calls for non-parking downtown streets to relieve congestion and facilitate traffic. The committee would bar parking from the following thoroughfares between the hours of 7 o'clock this morning and 6 o'clock in the evening:

Peachtree and Whitehall streets, from Cain to Mitchell; Forsyth, from Peachtree to Mitchell; Broad, from Marietta to Alabama; Pryor, from Edgewood avenue to Auburn; James, from Peachtree to Fairlie.

The committee also recommended more stringent regulations to govern traffic offenders. The third offense within a three-month limit would be punishable with a fine fixed at not less than $100, and additional violations would be punishable by both fine and imprisonment, in the discretion of the recorder.

On the non-parking provision the vote stood 6 to 4. The dissenting members were J. P. Allen and O. J. Bloodworth, representing the retail merchants, and John M. Smith and E. E. Maffett, representing the automobile dealers.

At another meeting to be held next Tuesday morning the committee will fix the time limit for parking in zones left parking territory.

A committee composed of F. L. Butler, of the Georgia Railway and Power company; J. M. VanHalingen, president of the Atlanta Motor club; J. P. Allen, retail merchant, and Councilman J. C. Murphy, was named by Chairman Edgar Watkins to designate safety aisles for street car patrons in the congested district.

FIVE CAROLINIANS FINED ON CHARGE OF TAX-DODGING

Greenville, S. C., November 1.—Five South Carolina cotton manufacturers pleaded guilty today in United States district court here to a charge of evading the federal income tax law and were sentenced to pay fines or serve jail sentences. H. H. Watkins, Campbell Courtenay and St. John Courtenay, of Columbia, were ordered to pay fines of $10,000 each or serve eight months in the county jail, while Ashmead Courtenay and Henry Rutledge Buiet, of Charleston, were sentenced to pay fines of $3,000 each or serve three months in jail.

Hundreds Visit City Collections Electrical Home Show Increase On Opening Night Over Last Year

Following the formal opening of Atlanta's first Home Electrical at 7:30 o'clock last night, nearly 900 visitors inspected the "ideal home" from cellar to garret, and officials of the Atlanta Electrical association, who fostered the exhibition of the home, made hurried plans to accommodate a far larger number of visitors than had been expected during the remaining two weeks that the home is to be open.

Promptly at 7:30, as had been announced, Mayor Key made a short address of welcome to the waiting crowd, following which he touched a button, flooding the home with electric light, and putting into operation the hundreds of electrical devices with which the home is equipped.

Comparing the work of the modern electrician with the work of the old-fashioned magicians of ancient times, the mayor declared that wonderful as the things are being demonstrated with the fabled magicians of ancient times, the modern electrician has made the simple labor of home of joy, and has brought within reach of the income of the average person. At the same time, he added, splendid as these things are, they are not the end of the wonders that electricity will perform in this home, their reputation as lists must have been stupendous.

The Electrical home was built and equipped by the Atlanta Electrical association in cooperation with the Clark Stewart company, builders, and the Chamberlain-Johnson-DuBoise Co., with the purpose of making not only an ideal home, but to have in it as well the last word in electrical equipment which will make for comfort and convenience. It is intended purely as a demonstration of the uses to which electricity may be put in the home. Nothing is sold at the home, and no orders are taken. The wiring plans, and specifications have been printed, together with directions for building electrically equipped homes, and are given to visitors.

The home will remain open for two weeks. No admission has been charged, and visitors are welcomed from 2 to 10 p. m. each day. It is located at 55 South Prado.

Tax Books Will Remain Open Until November 15, Committee Announces.

City taxes collected from January 1 to October 31, 1922, exceed the taxes collected during the same period in 1921 by $422,262, according to a report submitted to the tax committee of the city council Wednesday afternoon by tax collectors.

Collections are better than in a number of years past. Actual revenue received to date totals $2,998,835, while on October 31 last year only $2,575,723 had been paid in by the taxpayers.

The committee voted another extension of time until November 15 before the tax books will close permanently for the year. After that date, if a tax is issued against delinquents.

A delegation of Atlanta producers appeared before the committee and asked a reduction of their license from $60 to $25 a year. Their request was referred to the city attorney.

HARDWICK ORDERS PROBE OF CAMPS

were presented to the governor in behalf of the committee by Charles N. Walker, president of the Atlanta Civic league. Others on the committee were W. W. Orr, Marion Jackson and James Morton.

Governor Hardwick told the members of the committee that in some cases whipping convicts was necessary as a last resort but he said such whippings should be reported by the authorities and should take place only in the presence of a physician.

Reforms Are Sought.
"Reforms along the line of whipping of convicts," Mr. Walker told the Constitution Wednesday night, "have been sought after for some time by the committee on church co-operation. We have been before the governor several times with our ideas, and we are delighted that he has approved them."

"Only thirteen states in the entire country have failed to abolish corporal punishment among its convicts, Alabama having recently done away with the system, and all the states that have made the change find it works better than the inhumane practice of common promiscuous lashing.

"In Georgia no facilities are provided for properly punishing men who refuse to work or are guilty of misconduct, so that until these things are provided, there must of necessity be some whipping as punishment."

"Consequently, our aim is to humanize the system of lashing convicts and to assure that fair treatment be given the men. One handicap is that prison guards, we find, are as a general rule, a low order of men, with their instincts for brutal punishment whetted by their environment. Any convict who incurs their ill will is apt to be flogged at any moment on any provocation—or none at all, for we have no means of checking up on the treatment of prisoners."

Flogged Unmercifully.
"This committee has cited to the governor cases where men were flogged unmercifully and left in a dangerous state of physical being. We have even shown him where convicts were whipped and died, and instances of administering of as many as 25 or 30 lashes at the time are rather common, when the law specifically provided that ten lashes at a time is the limit allowed."

"We wish to put into force a system by which a guard must turn in a written complaint against a prisoner guilty of misconduct and that the prison commission must review the report and decide on the punishment."

"Then some prison official who did not turn in the report and had nothing to do with the complaint will be designated to administer the penalty. Also a physician will be in attendance to assure proper medical attention if it is needed. In this way we will eliminate the possible element of personal animosity in punishing refractory prisoners."

"Brutally Beaten."

"A case which came to our attention recently was of an educated convict who was 'brutally' beaten. When he had received something like 30 lashes he turned to the guard whipping him and asked: 'Do you know that you are violating the law in giving me more than ten lashes?' And the guard's reply, 'we are the law here. He him up again, boys.' And the convict was given another whipping then and there for his statement to the guard."

Mr. Walker stated that the governor had expressed full sympathy with the prison reform program outlined by the committee, which is also preparing for the governor's approval a system of penalties for prison camp authorities who exceed their authority in using the lash or who are found guilty of inhumane treatment of prisoners.

The program, together with the proposed new system on lashing, will be submitted to Governor Hardwick in the course of only a day or two, Mr. Walker said.

YOUNG GIRL FOUND IN PITIFUL STATE

Reports received late today were that the girl has a high fever and that her condition was growing steadily worse.

When found by Joe Preeks, a farmer, three and a half miles east of Dublin last night, Rosalie was wet from splashing through a small creek and her body was bleeding from barbed wire and underbrush cuts. The girl wore no hat and no underclothing.

Rosalie was kidnapped Sunday as she returned from church, when a man drove up to her home, declaring he was the father of one of the girl's little chums. He asked the child's mother if Rosalie could come and have dinner with his daughter. Mrs. Shanty is said to have given her consent with the proviso that Rosalie must be home before dark.

EVERYBODY ASKS WILL ANDY WIN?

bitter political battles that have been fought out in the state recently. Democrats from Chicago received Wednesday were to the effect that Andy Gump, in his race for congress from the United States at large, has taken the limit off the game, and is wearing out five fountain pens an hour writing checks for the campaign fund. His next out of $50,000 won after a hard-fought battle in the Widow Zander affair, is melting away like an ice cream cone in an East Point boy's mouth. Cablegrams to Uncle Sam Gump in Australia have been passing Wednesday. It was learned, and it is hinted that Uncle Sam is looking with favor on the Andy candidacy, and is preparing to turn loose a slush fund in behalf of Andy that will make Senator Newberry's barrel campaign look like a pay check after the first of the month bills are paid.

Setting Swift Pace.

Andy Gump is setting such a swift pace that his two regular party opponents are already howling "fraud." One is Oatenko, the republican nominee, and Obadiah Turnspeed, the democratic candidate, whose candidacy is also being howled by the predatory interests, are both trying to create the impression that the Gump money is to be used in buying votes.

Peachtree :: Walton :: Broad

The intimation was indignantly denied in a statement issued Wednesday by Representative Jimmonweek Jones, head of the "For Andy" clubs of Georgia.

"There ain't no political money being spent in Georgia," the representative declared. "There ain't none left after the recent campaigns."

Much speculation is noted on every hand as to what Sidney Smith is going to do with Andy. The arguments over this question are so numerous that they are affecting the leading activities of the city. If you go in a store to buy a necktie you'll soon be drawn into an argument over the question. On the street cars, in the hotel lobbies, at the soda fountains, in the beer bars, at the pool tables, and in the clubs, cafes, banks, business houses, sewing circles, secret order meetings, Wednesday night prayer services and crap games the subject of what Sidney Smith will do with Andy is the all-absorbing topic.

If Andy Meets Defeat.
"If Smith lets Andy get defeated it will kill Andy," is the claim of the supporters of the Gump candidacy. "He can't afford to allow him to lose this race, even if he has to bring Uncle Sam back on a surprise visit to help pay the freight. We'd even forgive him if he allowed Uncle Sam to fall in love with the Widow Zander again and marry her this time if he'd only let Andy set up there to congress and keep us informed on what Andy does in congress."

The opponents of Gump are sure that Sidney Smith will never permit his cartoon hero to be elected. "Old Andy is going to lose out all the way around," say the anti-Gumps. "He is going to wake up on November 8 defeated worse than a tail-end ball team. All his $50,000 will be gone. His conceit will be knocked out of him. He will realize that he is not the master mind after all and that it was good fortune rather than the good sense that led to his temporary advancement. He'll have to begin all over again after the election next Tuesday."

Which side is right cannot be ascertained. The only thing certain about the whole thing is that Andy's race has got 'em stirred up in all parts of Georgia and the suspense grows more taut as each day goes by. In another day it looks like every person in the state will become a member of a "For Andy" or "Against Andy" club. "Come out and let the world know where you stand" is the slogan of both the pro-Gumps and the anti-Gumps. And that's just what everybody's doing.

GEORGIA TO SAVE $5,800,000 IN TAXES

these reductions have stimulated activities in other lines as well as giving much-needed relief to the masses of the people, and that in his opinion the encouragement thus given to manufacturing, road building, and other developments is producing expansion in other classes of business in this district, which will furnish sufficient additional taxes under the present law to absorb most, if not all, of the $5,800,000 of direct taxes which was eliminated by the passage of the present revenue act.

CONFEDERATE WOMEN WINDOW DEDICATED

ercises and Mrs. Algernon Sydney Sullivan, honorary president, unveiled the memorial which was accepted by Chairman John Barton Payne of the Red Cross, in a brief address. Right Rev. Alfred Harding, Episcopal bishop of Washington, then formally dedicated it.

The window was unveiled from behind the stars and stripes while in the assembly room the stars and bars of the confederacy were conspicuous. Claude N. Bennett of this city delivered the principal address, citing the heroic work of the women of the south in mitigating the sufferings of the sick and wounded during the war. Invocation was given by Bishop Harding, and "The Star Spangled Banner" and "Dixie" were then sung by Miss Josephine Houston and the audience. Lieutenant-General Charles B. Howry, of the United Confederate Veterans, in an address praised the work of mercy carried on by the women of the south during the war, and after the singing of "America" the benediction was given by Rev. George F. Dudley.

The memorial window symbolizes a scene from Spencer's "Faerie Queen," it shows Una, typifying fortitude, her apron trailing roses, symbolic of good deeds. Her attendants are with her, one bearing a white banner on which blazes a golden heart, another a cross, another a lamp—the "lamp of wisdom."

NAGGING THE PRESIDENT.

A Washington news dispatch says that wherever the president goes he is being "picketed" for the release of the so-called "political prisoners" who are still confined in federal prisons serving sentences imposed for seditious acts committed, or sentiments expressed, while the country was engaged in the world war.

"For the past week," says the news report, "petitioners of the joint amnesty committee have stood in front of the white house with banners urging a general amnesty." While the president is at work or when he seeks the golf links for an hour of diversion and relaxation he is continuously confronted by the amnesty "pickets," and his tormentors even invade the sacred precincts of the church where he goes to worship.

As the Associated Press correspondent expresses it—
"The president's golf club has been picketed every afternoon he played golf, while on Sunday four pickets signed themselves outside the Calvary Baptist church where the president usually attends.

This sort of business must be painfully annoying to the president. It is silly, undignified, and at the same time harmful to the public welfare, and it should not be permitted.

Every inmate of a federal prison has had his "day in court." He was found guilty of crime against the government, and penalty was imposed in accordance with law.

The president has authority, of course, to pardon any one or all of them; but no group or element of society has a moral right to try to force him or to torment him into going it against the dictates of his conscience.

It is permissible for any man or group of men to appeal to the president in behalf of those of any cause, and to try to convince him by evidence and argument that a given course is the right one for him to pursue.

But for the president of the United States to have to submit to being badgered and pestered and tormented day and night, wherever he goes—even when he goes to church—is unreasonable, and it should not be tolerated even in a most liberal democracy.

THE CURE FOR SPEEDING.

After eight citizens had been convicted of speeding and sent to jail, without the alternative of paying fines, by a police judge in San Francisco a few days ago, a San Francisco Chronicle reporter asked each his opinion of the "jail sentence" idea and the "punish-all policy" under which that court is operating.

The replies are both significant and illuminating.

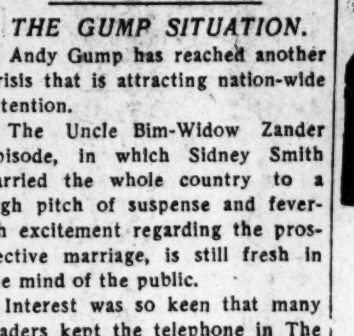

"Sure the judge was right," said one, "and I am perfectly willing to serve. I'm not sure, because I'm wrong; but I'll never speed again, you bet!"

Said another: "Of course, it's right. It's the only way to cure speeding. It isn't pleasant to have to serve a jail sentence, but it's right, nevertheless."

"My case was an accident," said the third, "and I was not speeding. However, I am in sympathy with the policy of sending speeders to jail."

THE GUMP SITUATION.

Andy Gump has reached another crisis that is attracting nation-wide attention.

The Uncle Bim-Widow Zander episode, in which Sidney Smith carried the whole country to a high pitch of suspense and feverish excitement regarding the prospective marriage, is still fresh in the mind of the public.

Interest was so keen that many readers kept the telephone in the Constitution office busy the night before the wedding date by requests for advance information as to whether or not the wedding was actually to take place as scheduled.

There were the pro-Zanderites and the anti-Zanderites—the former sympathizers with the widow and insisting that she should marry the rich Australian; the latter denouncing her as a spurious fortune-seeker bent upon marrying Uncle Bim solely for his money.

And now the question uppermost in the minds of the multitude is: Will Andy Gump be elected to congress?

Here enters the mystery of the artist's mind.

Sidney Smith can put the aggressive "100-per-cent-for-the-people" candidate in congress, or he can keep him out.

The question is, what is he going to do?

This momentous riddle is to be solved on the seventh of this month, and the interest incident to the recent Georgia senatorial election pales into insignificance by comparison with that being manifested in the political fortunes of Andrew Gump, who "wears no man's collar!"

It is being discussed in thousands of Georgia households.

The Constitution is being overwhelmed with mail matter bearing upon this absorbing controversy—with letters from correspondents who argue pro and con, one school maintaining that Andy should and will be elected, the opposing faction taking the position that he will and deserves to be defeated.

The pro-Gump faction contends that Andy's defeat would leave him in an impossible situation.

It holds that Sidney Smith, in order to keep alive interest in the Gump feature, must put Andy in congress and let him maintain his grip upon public attention by his eccentricities and pyrotechnics in office.

The opposing element, numerically as strong as the other, is equally as insistent in predicting that the morning of November 8th will find Andrew Gump an overwhelmingly defeated "has-been," dejected, disgusted with human nature, down and out.

Those taking that view hold that the logical thing for the artist to do is to let Andy come to his senses on "the morning after," minus the $50,000 that he had obtained from the wreckage of the Bim-Zander romance, and with his only hope hinged upon another appeal to his millionaire uncle for a new "stake" upon which he might start life anew, after having been victimized, by professional political Warwick.

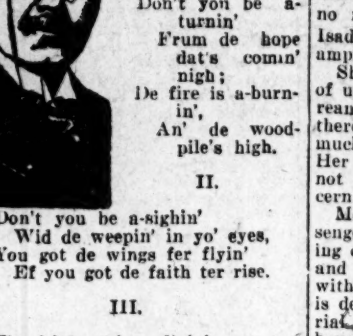

Thus the contention between the two factions goes merrily on! Which is right?

The Constitution does not know. Nobody knows, except possibly Sidney Smith—and he won't tell!

So the only thing to do is to await the idea of November—the morning after election, which will tell the story!

Cheer Up, Writers!
Words are not idle things with Rudyard Kipling. The New York Times says, in its literary notes—
"Kipling has received between $2,600 and $3,000 for short stories of about 6,000 words in length, and that for the American rights only. That is at the rate of about 30 cents a word for this country, with high revenues to be added in other countries. In 1899 it was reported that each short story netted Kipling at least $5,000 and his book royalties then in America and England alone were said to be more than $20,000."

TODAY'S TALK

BY GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS
(Copyright, 1922, for The Constitution)

REINCARNATION.
I am neither a theologian nor a scientist—yet as a plain human being, even as you do read this.

But I must admit that I speculate a great deal about the many earthly manifestations that beat against this brain of mine.

The other evening on a train, while traveling across the western Canadian plains, I got into conversation with a very delightful gentleman of rare intelligence. The talk finally drifted to religion and the future of this present bodily life of ours.

My new acquaintance frankly stated that he believed in reincarnation, and that he was now the new life of some former beautiful tree!

I have met few strangers whose beauty of character shone so unmistakably from their faces as did that of my companion.

It seemed a most beautiful thought anyway—once to have been a grand and majestic tree. And then this man went on to talk of many characters in history and to explain how they were undoubtedly reincarnations of other great characters long tucked away into the arms of eternal sleep.

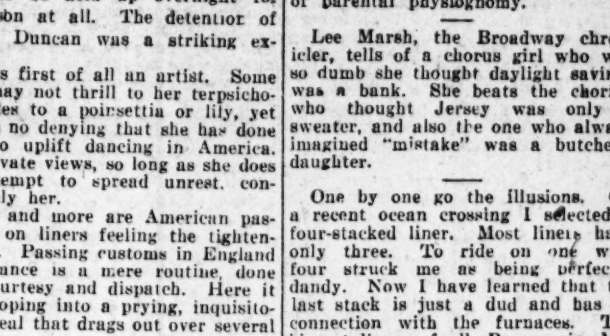

One thing is very sure, and that is that nothing in nature or human life really dies. It is just one continuous story of change, movement, or perhaps—merely sleep!

The comfort of the ages to the human soul is that nothing good can ever be lost.

I look into the face of my dog. No eyes were ever more sincere than his as he looks honestly into mine and wags his tail. He loves me and I love him. All night he will rest peacefully about the house if I close my bedroom door against him—but the minute I open it, he will be peacefully down and sleep the whole night through.

Bits of New York Life

BY O. O. MINTYRE

New York, November 1.—Recentment against blundering at Ellis island is growing. Any American citizen is liable to be held up overnight for no reason at all. The detour of Isadora Duncan was a striking example.

She is first of all an artist. Some of us may not thrill to her terpsichorean odors to a polka-dotted or lily, yet there is no denying that she has a much to uplift dancing in America. Her private views, so long as she does not attempt to spend unrest, concern only her.

More and more are American passengers on liners feeling the tightness of reaching home again only to find a more human and sympathetic atmosphere at customs.

It chills patriotism to arrive glowing with thankfulness at the prospect of reaching home again only to be buffeted about and held up for many hours while luggage is turned topsy-turvy. There have been many cases of hysteria among women at the local docks.

Worn by a long voyage and anxious to see loved ones after extended periods of reaching home again only to find a more human and sympathetic atmosphere at customs.

HEALTH TALKS

BY WILLIAM REED, M. D.

THE BACHELOR WAY TO PREPARE WHEAT.
It almost makes me blush now when I think how pure and unadorned my impulses and ambitions were when I launched into the practice of medicine in a quiet little village years ago. I recall how an old doctor there took me under his wing—or rather he allowed me to drive him out in the country to give him counsel in a case that had me treed—and as we ambled along the dusty road he pointed out many of his old patients and assured me they were as "good as the wheat in the bin." It took me about four years to learn that the wheat in the bin is not necessarily very good—and I learned a lot in those four years.

Here is a bachelor, of all people, telling us how to prepare wheat to eat. Listen to the man go on:

"Your recipe for bran cookies, printed September 27 with a request for the prayers of the congregation for the early recovery of the beneficiaries of the recipe, was good. I want to recommend something I find equally effective as a preventive of constipation and much simpler. A person who is bulking it doesn't need a cook to prepare a wheat remedy against the pill habit. He can do it himself.

"Take the whole wheat as you get it from the farmer or feed store, dry it out in a pan or on the back of the stove, pick it clean of chaff, and grind it in an ordinary coffee or spice mill, not too fine. Then cook in a double boiler—and this is longer if it is cooked, the better. Eat a generous dish of it two or three times a day, with milk or cream or sugar, or something such as apples, stewed in quaters or berries of any kind, and you have something worth eating!"

Another way to eat wheat is just to take a handful out of the bin, basket, box or bag and eat it.

Still another way is to wash the whole wheat with cold water, and then cook the unground wheat over night in a fireless cooker. Or, if you have a fire going all night, let it simmer until breakfast time. Still another way is to wash the wheat with cold water, and then cook it in a steam cooker, stirring it every little while to keep it from sticking. Still another way is to boil the ground wheat for an hour or more at night, and then fry cakes of it for breakfast in the morning—this is longer if it is cooked, the better. Eat a generous dish of it two or three times a day, with milk or cream or sugar, or something such as apples, stewed in quaters or berries of any kind, and you have something worth eating!"

There is no part of the wheat kernel that is not wholesome to eat, and if it is eaten habitually through breads and cakes the people might save many millions of dollars now squandered annually for nostrums and treatments which, after all, do not cure the manifold minor ailments which undermatured wheat prevents.

No phase of Mr. Lincoln's character was so persistently misrepresented as this of his religious belief.

For many years, says in his "Life of Abraham Lincoln," page 489:

"Lincoln told me a thousand times that he did not believe the Bible was a revelation from God, nor did he believe that Jesus was the Son of God."

Don Platt was his campaign manager and friend and admirer. In his "Reminiscences of Lincoln," page 21, he says:

"When a man dies all good men go to try to find out what he was, and if I did not know him in the Lincoln I did not know him in the Lincoln."

His wife had been a conscious of his religious beliefs if he had any—Lincoln says:

"His own wife was distressed because he had no faith, no hope."

It became a political necessity to put him as the greatest, wisest and Godliest man that ever lived.

This is why I said "Lincoln should not be held up before Christian children as an example to follow."

The Polk says "Lincoln" was a praying man because it is known that before the battle of Gettysburg he prayed to God, saying if the north gained the victory at Gettysburg he would issue his emancipation proclamation. "Hasn't Mr. Polk gotten confused about this matter?" Barnes, the historian, is our authority for this statement, and he says on page 531 of his Popular History of the United States that Mr. Lincoln made a rash statement that if Lee were driven from Maryland he would free the slaves on the seceding states.

Mr. Polk possibly did not know that the name of God was not mentioned in the emancipation proclamation until some of the cabinet insisted that this should be inserted. Had he been a praying man, God would have been first in his thoughts.

Mr. Polk objects to my speaking of Mr. Lincoln as "a weather cock to show which way the political wind blew," a political dancer who swayed about every question in circles, and a chameleon to change with the company he kept.

My authority is Lincoln's own words. When dealing with the border states he said:

"Slavery is not to be interfered with."

"This war is against slavery." When dealing with foreign nations he said:

Georgia as a whole has been behind the other states in the division in previous calls, although Georgia has done her full part. This year a special effort is to be made to put Georgia in the front rank of the southern division, and it will take something like 100,000 members to do it.

The work of the Atlanta chapter is not confined to the city alone but extends to the limits of Fulton county. Relief work through the visiting nurse service and other activities cover the entire county as well. It is anticipated, therefore, that a substantial proportion of the membership of the Atlanta chapter will come from Fulton county outside the city limits.

MRS. HALL DENIES PART IN MURDER

ed spinning wheel and some children's toys, it might have been a courtroom. Certainly as the drama unfolded, and one questioner after another took up the searching probe into Mrs. Hall's life, there was a feeling that the proceedings. Two official court stenographers were present to take down a transcript of questions and answers.

Mrs. Hall was not represented by an attorney. She answered each question without a moment's hesitation, entirely unaided. Those who have been barred from the Stevens home, were invited to enter the parlor. They ranged in an informal semi-circle, with many of the guests of note, enough to disturb even one not generally suspected of complicity in a murder.

Timothy Miller, Mrs. Hall's lawyer, introduced her, as telling her to take the stand—and then immediately withdrew.

She was certainly a woman of about fifty years or more, dressed in a simple black gown with a light black silk scarf thrown over her shoulders, standing unconcernedly before them. Short in stature, the pastor's widow gave the impression of being thick-set, but her silk-clad ankles were slim as a girl's. Mrs. Hall seated herself in a rocking chair. The court stenographers noted their pens, and the trial proceeded.

For fifty minutes, questioners trained in the art of cross-examination firing questions at Mrs. Hall. She answered several hundred with but a single exception. When asked where Dr. Hall acquired the $20,000 which she said was the amount of his wealth at the time of the murder, she requested permission not to answer. She denied any knowledge of the perpetration of the crime. She declared herself willing to confront Mrs. Gibson, her accuser, if the authorities saw fit.

Seemed Unmoved. In answering questions that exposed ruthlessly her life with the slain pastor, she spoke distinctly, in a low voice. Her heavy black eyebrows were drawn together occasionally in thought as she took an instant to consider her answer to some particularly searching question. She wore eye-glasses. The corners of her mouth were drawn down grimly, but there was no evidence of suppressed emotion.

She seemed like a woman unmoved even by the terrible tragedy that has wrecked her home.

"How horrible it would be to have someone come forward and tell about the murder," was a remark that gave an inkling of her viewpoint towards the whole affair.

"All my life I have sought to avoid publicity,"—the phrase was typical of the aristocracy she represents.

Yet there was nothing austere about the widow during the trying interview. She showed no resentment at the most penetrating query. She sat, sometimes rocking slightly, tip of one satin slipper just touching the floor, almost like an automaton, question, answer, question, answer, mostly yes and no, without a break in her voice or a quiver of her heavy eyelids.

Her arms, she kept tightly folded, hands hidden in the folds of her scarf.

so that if her fingers, clenching, betrayed emotion, it was not visible. At the end, her questioners, had exhausted every phase of the mystery. Mrs. Hall, still unmoved, stood up. She had been subjected to the questioning, for it surpassed her belief how anyone could think her guilty, she said.

All the questions that have arisen in the public mind concerning the many angles to the tragedy and the lives of the principals were flung at Mrs. Hall. She, it had been said all along, held the answer to most of them. But her invariable answer was that she knew nothing.

She knew nothing of her husband's affair with Mrs. Mills. She still believes him absolutely true to her. Asked what she thought about Mrs. Mills' part in the affair, however, she said she did not know what to say. She practically admitted that she had been convinced of Mrs. Mills' guilt while still believing her husband innocent of any wrong-doing.

Probers may consider their futile search for clues. There may be indictments and possibly a trial—but to all intents and purposes the most dramatic appeal in the mystery has been satisfied.

The Cross-Examination

New Brunswick, N. J., November 1.—(By the Associated Press.)—Breaking her silence today for the first time, Mrs. Frances Noel Hall today told reporters that she was absolutely ignorant of how her husband, Edward Wheeler Hall, came to meet his death with Mrs. Eleanor R. Mills, choir singer on Phillips farm September 14.

The rector's wife at an interview in her home, arranged by her attorney, Timothy M. Pfeiffer, asserted that she had absolutely no knowledge of the shooting, that she was not in the farm the night of the double shooting; that she bore no enmity toward either Dr. Hall or Mrs. Mills and that she had no knowledge of any love letters having passed between them.

Asked if she were holding anything back in order to protect anyone near and dear to her she replied: "Positively no."

Still Trusts Husband. She asserted she still believed her husband had been true to her. Asked her feeling toward Mrs. Mills, she replied: "I don't know what to say."

Asked why she had offered no reward for solution of the crime she replied: "I think it would be awful."

When she was asked if she did not wish to see the murderer punished she replied: "I don't wish to see anyone punished."

She explained that she meant that she had no vindictive feeling toward any one and that she wished the murderer apprehended only because she did not think it safe for society to have him at large.

Ignorant of Motive. The questions started with one which concerned the story told by Mrs. Jane Gibson, pig raiser, who claims to have been on the Phillips farm the night of the murders and to have been an eye-witness to the double slaying.

Here on any comment to make, Mrs. Hall, on that part of Mrs. Gibson's statement in which she said they were present on the Phillips farm on the night of September 14.

"What comment could I make? Of course, that was not so, and that is all."

"You weren't there?" "Did you leave your house at any time that night except when you went out with your brother?"

"Will you give your movements as nearly as you can recall on the night of September 14?" "Wouldn't you rather ask questions?"

"Will you tell us your movements on the night of September 14 as near as you can remember?"

Movements on Fatal Night. "We had our supper about 6:30 o'clock and I went on the porch for a little while after that. I had Mr. Hall's little niece with me. His brother was there and Mr. Hall was here at supper time. I stayed out on the porch for a little while and then a little later came in with the little girl and played games with her for a while until 8:30 or 8:45 o'clock somewhere along there. Then I put her to bed upstairs and came down again."

It was somewhere along about 9 o'clock, I should say, and I sat here in the library reading until about 10:30 o'clock, and then I went upstairs and prepared for bed. I went to bed but I did not go to sleep.

"So between the time that he left the house and the time you went out with your brother in the early morning you did not at any time leave the house?"

"No." "Do you know now, Mrs. Hall, from whom that telephone call was that evening?" "That came that evening?"

"Yes." "They told me it was from Mrs. Mills but I only know that from the outside."

"Did you overhear any of the conversation?" "No." "Have you ever been to the Phillips farm that you know of in your life?"

"Never. I did not know until later that it was the old Deruesey place. As a child I had been there twice. But not since you were a child?"

"No." "Phoned to Police." "Mrs. Hall, after you had gone to the church at 2 o'clock in the morning and not having found your husband there did you take any further steps between that time and 7 o'clock in the morning? Notify your friends or inquire of the police or do anything about your husband's absence?"

"As you all know, I walked down past the Mills house to see if by any chance any one was ill or there was any light there. Knowing that Mr. Hall had gone out, and as he left the house saying he was going to see about this bill (referring to a hospital bill of Mrs. Mills) toward which both the rector and his wife had been contributing. But you know this: I have repeated it many times. I have told you he was going to see about this bill that Mrs. Mills spoke of and I know it was the rector's bill to me and I thought he might have sent word there (Mills house) where he was going. I went up there to see if there was any light. Any thing to see, if he was there, but seeing no light I came back."

"About how long were you absent from the house?" "It was about 2:30 when I dressed and went out; I came back about 2:30."

"From 2:30 until approximately 7 in the morning you took no further steps to find out what caused your husband's absence?" "If telephone to the police."

"That night?" "No, I think it was about 7 in the morning."

"But between 2:30 and 7 didn't you make any inquiries?" "None whatever."

Brother Present. "Was your brother Willie with you all the time you were out?" "Yes."

"Willie was with you when you came back?" "Yes."

"Mrs. Hall, have you seen any of the letters that are supposed to have been written by your husband to Mrs. Mills?"

"Very little." "About their handwriting?" "I haven't seen them except the one I saw in the prosecutor's office."

"Do you believe he wrote those letters?" "I think it very unlikely that he would."

"Did you ever see any letters from Mrs. Mills to your husband or from your husband to Mrs. Mills?" "No."

"Did you know that they were corresponding?" "I know that he wrote her last summer."

"Did you know the contents of any of those letters?" "No."

"Did anybody ever carry any tale to you concerning your husband's relations with Mrs. Mills?" "Absolutely nothing."

"No member of the church ever brought you a letter nor telephoned anything to arouse your suspicions?" "No."

"Did anybody ever tell you that your husband was writing to Mrs. Mills or to her?" "Never."

No Suspensions. "Did you ever have any reason before the shooting to suspect your husband's relations as far as Mrs. Mills were concerned?" "Absolutely none."

"What is your feeling toward your husband?" "I feel he is true to me."

"What is your feeling toward Mrs. Mills?" "I do not know what to say."

"Do you feel at all inimical toward Mrs. Mills?" "I have no vindictive feeling."

"Did you know anything, Mrs. Hall, which you do not care to tell us for fear you may embarrass somebody you know? Somebody very near and dear to you?" "Nothing."

"In other words, you are holding back nothing?" "Absolutely nothing."

"Have you any idea or any knowledge as to who might have done this thing?" "I have absolutely no idea as to the motive."

"I know nothing about your husband's movements after he left here except what you heard when you went to Mr. Mills' home?"

"Did you ever have any feeling of enmity toward Mrs. Mills?" "None whatever."

"Did you ever have a quarrel with Mrs. Mills?" "No."

"Did you have any controversy with her on the day you went with her to Lake Hopkirk?" "No."

"You state that you understand or know that your husband wrote Mrs. Mills last summer. Will you tell how you knew that?"

"The pastor was sending cards to all the parish. Mrs. Mills wrote me and she said he had sent her cards."

"Did she say he had written letters?" "No; she didn't say that."

"Do you know what the contents of those letters were?" "Yes, I did."

"When you phoned the police on the morning of the murder, as we understood, you merely asked whether there had been an auto accident and did not report your husband missing?"

"I said he had gone out and had not returned. I did not tell the police who I was. I asked if there had been any accident which might account for his not returning."

"Why did not you tell the police who you were?" "I thought I could get the information without giving my name."

"Was there any enmity between Henry Stevens and your husband?" "No."

"Or Willie and your husband?" "Never."

"Why did Henry absent himself from your wedding?" "He was away traveling at the time."

Husband Had $20,000. Mrs. Hall corrected herself that her husband had $40,000 in negotiable securities in a safety deposit vault when he was killed, declaring the amount was about $20,000.

"I don't know what the source of it was," she was asked. "Is that necessary? All those questions have nothing to do with it," she asked.

When the reported insisted declaring it might have some bearing on the blackmail theory which she had advanced as a motive, Mrs. Hall finally consented to say that half of the sum was left him by her mother. She steadfastly refused to say where the remainder came from.

Later, her attorney said her delicacy in speaking of the rest of Mr. Hall's securities arose from the fact that she herself had presented him with them.

The questioners next jumped to the so-called "eye witness" story of Mrs. Jane Gibson, the pig farmer, asking if she could explain why Mrs. Gibson would have told such a story if it were not true.

She denied Mrs. Gibson's statement that they had met at a rummage sale, asserting: "I never seen her."

"Would you be willing to confront her if it became necessary?" she was asked. "I would do whatever the prosecutors wish me to do."

No Fear of Outcome. "You have no fear, in your mind of the outcome of this at all?" "No. My absolute innocence of any suspicion—I don't see that I have the slightest thing to worry about."

"How many times, Mrs. Hall, did you see Mr. Mills on that Friday?" "I know of two times. He says he came here in the evening, but I don't remember."

"When you were first notified that your husband's body was found, were you also told of Mrs. Mills' body being found?" "That is so—I think immediately."

"How was your body identified at that time?" "I am not sure, I think so."

"Will you tell us exactly how you heard they had been found dead together?" "I had no thoughts. I didn't know what to think."

"What was your immediate reaction?" "I was absolutely, stunned, I had no thought."

"And then, when that passed, what did you think?" "I can't tell you any more than I didn't know what to think."

"Mrs. Hall, suppose you had known that the relation between your husband and Mrs. Mills were very intimate, what would have done?" "What a strange question. Of course I would have spoken to him."

Against Blank Wall. "Can you tell us exactly how you have been feeling during these seven weeks? Won't you just tell us, in your own way, all of your reactions and all of your feelings about all of this; all your searches, all mean your mental searches, for a solution?" "I feel as if I was up against a blank wall. I have no idea what to do."

"You must realize that a lot of people believe you guilty."

"It seems to me most mysterious that any one should think such things. I cannot understand it, of course."

"Haven't you been eager for this opportunity to come out and tell how you stand about it?" "Frankly, I have heard so many things in the papers that I feel it is very uncertain what goes in the newspapers at all."

"If you have been your general feeling with respect to publicity; not about this case, but all your life?" "I have all my life avoided publicity in every possible way. There is no one who has led a more retired life."

Reward "Awful Thought." "There was a suggestion, some time past, about your offering a reward. Why didn't you do it? This suggestion came to you, I believe."

"Why should I offer a reward? It would be a most awful thought."

"Just what? Why?" "Why offer a reward to have some one to come out and tell of a murder?"

"You are anxious, however, that this whole thing should be cleared up?" "Why, of course."

"But you are not satisfied with what the authorities have done?" "No, but it seems that they let many things go by."

"Just exactly what feeling would prompt you to think it would be terrible to offer a reward?" "I don't think I can put it in words."

"Did William make a remark after the tragedy at the fire house that something terrible had happened?" "Not that I know of."

"Will you tell us why you acted thus? I am anxious to notify the police about your husband's absence, instead of your own relatives?" "I sent to Mr. Florence, the afternoon paper, and I had business dealings with him, other business, and I felt a lawyer was the person to send for."

"What did you mean by the statement, 'Of course, I have had a good deal of trouble'?" "I don't remember any such thing."

No Vindictive Feeling. "You want to see the murderers punished?" "I don't want to see anybody punished. I want to get the solution. I haven't a vindictive feeling to see anyone punished. I think anyone who has committed a murder is not a safe person to have at large, but as far as a vindictive feeling, I have none."

"Mrs. Hall, do you believe in divorce?" "That is a large question."

"You must have thought of that question a good deal?" "Naturally."

"Would you let us have your views on that subject?" "No, it is not a question to go into here."

You were asked what you would have done if you were told of the intimacy, or the alleged intimacy of Mrs. Mills, and Mr. Hall and you said that was a curious question. That was why you were asked if you believed in divorce. Would you have divorced him if it were put up to you?"

"I won't answer any such question."

"Mrs. Hall, when you were at the prosecutor's office, did you see one of the letters your husband is alleged to have written Mrs. Mills?" "Just a newspaper copy of one."

"Was that identical with your husband's writing?" "I only glanced at it. They showed me a signature of his in the facsimile, and I said it looked like it, but I could not guarantee it."

"Did you examine it at all closely?" "No."

"Weren't you interested in determining whether it was his handwriting?" "The letters did not seem to interest me at all."

No or the diary? "No."

Hasn't Read Diary. "Have you read any extracts from the diary?" "No."

"Did you know in May last summer that Dr. Hall was keeping a diary?" "No."

"You never saw that diary?" "No."

"Did you know that Mrs. Mills kept a diary during the same period?" "No."

Mrs. Hall then was asked whether there ever had been any insanity in her family. She replied that there had been none in her immediate family, but that the wife of one of her great uncles had become insane and that some of their children were "very nervous."

"The name was not Stevens?" she was asked. "No."

The questioners next asked Mrs. Hall to give them her estimate of the character of Mrs. Mills, whom she admitted she knew "quite well."

"I do not like to describe her character at all. I do not think I could," she said.

Jumping again to letters and diaries.

IF KIDNEYS ACHE
FLUSH WITH SALTS
Harmless way to clean your Kidneys and help Bladder.

Kidney and bladder irritations often result from uric acid, says a noted authority. The kidneys filter this acid from the blood and pass it on to the bladder, where it may remain to irritate and inflame, causing a burning, scalding sensation, or setting up an irritation in the neck of the bladder, obliging you to seek relief two or three times during the night. The sufferer is in constant dread; the water passes sometimes with a scalding sensation and is very profuse; again, there is difficulty in voiding it.

Bladder weakness most folks call it, because they can't control urination. While it is extremely annoying and sometimes very painful, this is often one of the most simple ailments to overcome. Get about four ounces of Jad Salts from your pharmacist and take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast; continue this for two or three days. This will help neutralize the acids in the urine so it no longer is a source of irritation to the bladder and urinary organs, which then act normal again.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, harmless, and is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and is used by thousands of folks who are subject to urinary disorders caused by uric acid irritation. Jad Salts is splendid for kidneys and causes no bad effects whatever. Here you have a pleasant, often quick relief bladder irritation. (adv.)

THE Citizens and Southern Bank, in common with every other business house and individual in Atlanta, owes a debt of gratitude to the Boy Scouts.

Atlanta has had but few opportunities to ask the Boy Scouts for assistance—the Scouts have always anticipated the opportunity to serve, and have offered their help before it could be asked.

In the big fire, during the various war drives, during the days of the fuel administration, during every convention and public gathering the Scouts have shown their willingness and ability to serve.

Many Scouts have Savings Accounts with the Citizens and Southern Bank—attracted by the Citizens and Southern spirit of service that their Scout training has taught them to so quickly recognize.

We have no accounts that we value more highly, and will gladly extend every service and convenience to the Scouts and their friends.

ATHENS OFFERED SERIES OF LEAGUE BALL GAMES

Athens, Ga., November 1.—(Special.)—A dispatch received here tonight by E. W. Carroll, secretary of the local chamber of commerce, offers Athens a series of baseball games next March between the St. Louis Cardinals and some American league club to be determined later.

The offer comes from Clarence F. Lloyd, traveling secretary of the Cardinals, and asserts that the strong National league club is making its first appearance in the southeast next spring, when they are to make training quarters at Bradenton, Fla.

Golf Tourney Planned.

Tampa, Fla., November 1.—Arrangements are being made for a golf tournament at Jacksonville with the advent of the state convention of dentists, surgeons to be held November 9, 10 and 11. It became known here today through local dentists. The Anderson Dental Supply company of this city has offered two prizes and others are expected to fall in line.

Tampa dental surgeons who will attend the convention and also participate in the golf competition include K. B. Alsbrook, W. A. Dean, C. L. Nance, C. J. Caraballo and R. C. Wilson.

PLAN MATCH BETWEEN DEMPSEY-MCKETRICK

New York, November 1.—The Broadway council of the National Order of Managers of Jack Dempsey, through Dan McKetrick, grand ballyhoo, is working on a match between Dempsey and Tommy Gibbons of St. Paul, for Madison Square Garden, some time this winter. Jack Kearns, supreme ballyhoo of the N. O. M. J. D., is believed to have inspired McKetrick's hint that Dempsey is contemplating a trip to Europe. The idea is to create an impression that Dempsey is dodging Gibbons. McKetrick, who calls himself the local representative of Kearns, intimated that Dempsey was to fight Batling Siki, the swarthy Senegalese, in London. There is a slight miscegenation in the schedule, however, for Siki is due to be in New York at the time when McKetrick would have him fighting Dempsey.

Clemson Noted for Hard Fighting When Facing Tech Football Teams

Yellow Jackets Far From Being Confident of Victory—Scrubs Are Using Clemson's Plays.

BY JOHN STATION.

Doc Stewart, Clemson coach, was mighty busy last Saturday. With pencil and notebook in hand, he jotted down all that Tech had to show. Scouting in these days and times has developed to such an extent that one employed in this capacity can almost bring back the family pedigree of each player, to say nothing of every play executed. And Doc Stewart, so they tell us, is very good in that line.

Well, by now he must know everything that Tech has, for she was forced to show it all last Saturday. Lots of stuff that had been saved up especially for Notre Dame was released with reckless abandon, in the endeavor to cut down a lead. So he has it all. There isn't any more.

We hear that he has his scrubs running the Tech plays. He has nothing on us. We have two teams that are running Clemson stuff. And every varsity squad will get a chance to oppose those plays in scrimmages. Yesterday it was the third varsity against those plays. And they did right well, though Clemson-by-proxy was crafty in spots. This afternoon it will be the first varsity against them, in all probability. Every man with the exception of Frye is in fine shape, and will probably get a stiff scrimmage.

Clemson, heretofore, has been the lull after the storm. There is always a tendency to let down in the Clemson game. It usually comes after some strenuous encounter. But there can be no lull at Saturday. If Tech intends to win that game, it is going to take sixty minutes of hard football to subdue those Tigers.

Coming to the bench on account of injuries. At the end of the half, these men were returned to the game, to win it or die. They won it, but took over a couple of hours of the game was won, not by superior football, but by superior weight. Tech just wore the fighting Tigers out, and then put over three touchdowns.

LANDIS AFTER MAJOR STARS

Vancouver, B. C., November 1.—Chances that rules applying to "baseball" exhibition games were violated when a team of major league "all-stars" played a local team before sailing for the Far East recently are being investigated by Judge K. M. Landis, baseball arbiter, it became known today.

The regulations stipulate that no touring team shall make use of more than three players who have performed in world's series games in any exhibition contest. When the major league stars played here, four world series men—Kelly and Meusel of the New York Giants, and Hoffman and Bush of the Yankees, appeared in the line.

Judge Landis, apprised of the fact, sent a radio message to the team, on board the liner Empress of Asia, demanding an explanation. The major leaguers in return sent a message to Robert Brown, manager of the Vancouver team, asking him to inform the baseball arbiter of the details of the affair.

Brown telegraphed Judge Landis, asserting that the exhibition match was a "baseball" game, and that the players were not touring, but were on a "baseball" tour, and that the rules were not violated, the players did not believe their action would have any serious results.

Bulldog and Tiger Work For Clash at Columbus; Both Teams Scrimmaging

Secret Practice Continues at Camp of Bulldog, But Plainsmen Do Their Work Before Students and Grid Fans.

Athens, Ga., November 1.—Sixteen that their favorite Tiger has, staring him in the face, a task that will require his utmost for a favorable decision.

All the regulars were in uniform and were given a rather healthy scrimmage with the scrubs, except Siltz, the husky flankman, who sustained a sprain in the Benning tilt last Saturday. Not much hope is being entertained for the big lineman unless the miraculous is accomplished in restoring the injury.

The appearance of Charlie Scott, the Tiger, speed merchant, in last Saturday's game has given the Plainsmen stock a boost and it is now expected that Scott will see service in the game Saturday.

The return of "Big Ed" Shirling and Charlie Gibson to the lineup means that Coach Donahue will order his first stringers to start in Saturday's game.

Rather Light Work.

The workouts this week will be rather light in an effort to prevent injuries on the eve of the big conflict. Manager John Davis tossed to the Tigers a trio of white balls today which will be used here for signal drill after further scrimmaging is impossible on account of darkness.

About two hundred reserved seats tickets are available at the athletic headquarters at Auburn, according to Professor C. L. Hare, faculty manager, and upwards of 1,500 are yet to be had at Hoffman & Greentree's at Columbus.

Will Uncork New Plays.

Coach Stearnman will have a greater variety of plays to uncork against the Plainsmen than he has displayed this season. That much has been made evident in the infinitesimal portion of the practice exposed to the reporter's eye this week.

Though he will have the tools in abundance, his man-power, despite reports to the contrary, is not up to its highest standard of efficiency. Teany Randall's widely-discussed worthiness mounted dash and test. This is no surprise, since grid men's knees are not among the most durable of their members.

Added to that irregularity, John Fletcher has a nose that is temperamental indeed. Smashed for a goal early in the season, the Fletcher facial promontory registers sincere grief with each brush it incurs. In the Tennessee game one of those pesky little Vols frilled the big boy on the button with sufficient gusto to draw the following ascription from our hero: "I felt in my mouth to see if that nose guard wasn't there." John is slowed down by this injury, and thereby perhaps the leading line crusher of the Bulldogs' attack is under the weather.

Major League Clubs Violate Rules Have Control of Too Many Players

BY HUGH S. FULLERTON

Baseball officials, club owners, the press, the fans, all are talking of reforming baseball and correcting all the abuses. They have done well, and perhaps even better. They have made some big steps forward to correct evils so far as good; but they have overlooked, either purposely or through ignorance of the big game, to put an end to the worst, the most crying evil of the game. It is not probable that Commissioner Landis knows what is going on. In fact, I doubt seriously whether even the guilty club owners ever have figured the total of their acts.

The offense against sportsmanship against the baseball, even when it is considered only as an amusement enterprise, is enormous. It lies in the ownership of ball players.

There is a law in baseball which tells the number of players each club may hold. They may have forty-two under contract and fifteen under reserve, subject to recall. I want to make a statement which I hope some club owner will deny. The statement is that there probably is not a major league club in the country that does not control at least 100 players. One club has at least 140.

There is no reason for going into details. Every major and minor league club owner knows that this statement is a fact. I have a lot of data—of course, incomplete—to submit. The temptation to cheat the rules through private agreements with club owners of other clubs is too great for the magnates to resist. There is a lot of money in dealing in live stock. The club owners have as many secret agreements as they have open agreements. The number of players held subject to orders from major clubs is simply ridiculous.

I would make a statement that there is no president of a minor league in America who, in receiving checks in "payment" for players does not know that he is certifying to a cheat on the laws of baseball. In that way "through" sales of players.

There is an odd fact in connection with Michigan football, and that is in connection with the "waste man" play which showed so prominently in the Ohio game. The history of that play is interesting. In 1909 Allardice, a kicker and passer, broke his hand. His right hand was unusable, so he could still kick and pass, but lost feared he would hurt the broken hand. To protect his broken hand, Allardice devised a tandem with Allardice eight yards back of the line, the quarter being under center, and Allardice back as to kick or pass. It was a threat formation which unexpectedly upset the entire defense of opponents. The formation took up the threat formation, and it became a menacingly successful merely as a threat play.

Necessity, the mother of invention, gave birth to a thing called strategy. (Copyright, 1922, for The Constitution.)

themselves and those which have merely found strong opposition. Michigan today is coming up more prominently than ever. Minnesota is coming strong and Iowa is getting back into its stride again.

Chicago has a good team—undoubtedly good. The midway boys lost the game with Princeton mathematically because they could not earn the possible extra points after touchdowns. But the deeper reason for their defeat lay in the fact that they did not realize how dangerous a Princeton team is when apparently going down to defeat.

Lack of this same knowledge of the Tiger's characteristics undoubtedly cost Harvard her game with Princeton last year. Chicago is not likely to expect the same opponent in like manner—at least not this year.

Knute Rockne, at Notre Dame, seems to be doing unexpectedly well in spite of the disruption of his last year's veterans, which cost him practically all of his stars. He still finds, however, that he cannot take chances by trying to save out two or three of his back field men. He was forced to shove them in last Saturday against Georgia Tech.

California is coming on as the leader out on the Pacific coast, but is not so strong as last year or the year before. There were some who thought the Berkeley team might find the wiping up of the University of Southern California too much of a job, but that team proved less strong than it was in 1921 and California came through.

Stanford is showing some improvement but it looks like a pretty hopeless task to defeat California at the end of November. There are other teams in the Pacific coast conference playing good football, but not good enough to handle Andy Smith's men.

SOUTH TO COME BACK.
The South certainly had its bumps in the defeat of Auburn by West Point, Georgia, by Chicago, Centre by Harvard and Georgia Tech by

VOLLEY BALL LOOP OPENS

The Business Men's Volley Ball league at the central Y. M. C. A. got under way Monday night with all teams playing bang-up ball.

The teams this season are much stronger and more evenly matched than ever before, and although the "Clams" and "Lobsters" were declared winners in the first set, not any of the games were won in easy fashion.

The Clams led by Bill O'Callahan kept the jump on the "Crabs" from the start, and by dint of hard playing managed to maintain their lead to the finish. This team is composed of Duzier, Langston, Vansiska, Waterhouse, Slater, W. C. Lamb, Thompson and Morrison.

The "Lobsters" took the "Oysters" into camp, due largely to the absence of Captain Smith. Mayfield has a good bunch and will no doubt make things up in general before the season is over. His team is composed of good fellows: Briggs, Snodgrass, Dement, Hutchinson, Dent, Atkinson, King and Little.

Standing to date—
Lobsters 3 0 1,000
Clams 3 0 1,000
Crabs 0 3 000
Oysters 0 3 000

Ruled Off Tracks.

Cleveland, Ohio, November 1.—Steve O'Boy, pacer, his owner, H. G. Cheney, of Sabine, Ohio, and his driver, Charles Slaght, were ruled off harness race tracks for life today by officials of the Cranford track here. Judges Joseph McGraw and R. S. Millman ruled that the men had attempted to "fix" the 2:10 pace.

Star Disqualified.

State College, Penn., November 1.—Penn State's hopes for victory over the Navy on Friday received a setback today when it became known that Scott Schuster, star left tackle, was disqualified for the remainder of the season for the violation of the one-year residence rule is charged.

Notre Dame, but let there be no mistake, the South is going at it again undiminished and will come back in future years.

There is an evening up process evidently going on in the standing of Penn State, Washington and Jefferson. The latter two teams, after two defeats, have begun to get together. Syracuse did well against Penn State and Bezek's team found it had not the scoring quality that marked it when Killinger was in moleskin. Lafayette and Washington and Jefferson are each good when all their crack men are in the line-up.

Pennsylvania, under Heisman, has made great strides. Penn's defeat of the Navy has opened the eyes of the public to the fact that the Philadelphia team is a coming and that it will play better football than an average college team.

The job of trimming the Cornells looks big, however, for the Ithacans are strong and steady. In Kaw, Cornell has one of the best men in the back field on the gridiron this year.

Harvard is devoting a lot of attention today to defensive tactics against possible Princeton forward pass attacks. A period of hard scrimmaging is in store for the Harvard regulars, who will not be spared, as the subs probably will carry the burden of the game against Florida Saturday.

Roper, at Princeton, has his second string men trying out Harvard formations against the regulars. Princeton is lucky in having the majority of its stars in excellent physical condition.

By CLIFF WHEATLEY

"One-eyed" Connally, sweet singer of the cinder trail and poet laureate of the Gate-crashers' Anaismaginated, has the following to say about his last night in Atlanta:

"Farewell, Atlanta, so long, good bye. I've hit the trail where the cinders fly. My eye won't lump this town, no more. You howled me down and made me sore. Now, all your tears can't bring me back. I'm gone when I reach that railroad track. I'm gonna travel from town to town. For I can't keep One-eyed Connally down. And some of these days, if you act too late, You'll see me crash the golden gate."

The "Shaving Strike." That's a fine trick the Louisiana Tigers, the Texas Christian university team and an outfit up in Ohio have of cheating the barber, not shaving until a game is entered in the won column. Suppose the Mercer eleven had adopted this system during the portion of their schedule that included Vanderbilt, Auburn and Georgia. A forest fire would be necessary in order to clear Macon of facial foliage.

And at Oglethorpe university lawn movers would take the place of safety razors.

Suppose the Crackers had gone in for the idea during the late campaign. "Dutch" Bernson would have looked like a working model of forest preservation.

Sam Mayer would be making his living as a side-show cave man, like Inko-Kinko, the bone-crushing aborigine of Skee-gee isles.

Joe Carter, Atlanta box fighter, can't be considered. Joe was never known to shave of his own volition.

Fred Fulton and Georges Carpentier would be using their whiskers for overcoats and Sir Thomas Lipton, the yacht racer, could wrap up the Shamrock in his flowing beard.

If Bill Bryan had permitted his hair to grow until he won a presidential election, he wouldn't be on, Syracuse and Pittsburgh. He'd have bought himself a whole country with proceeds from writing Herpicide testimonials.

We leave the Boston Braves to your imagination.

Sammy Morris Bobs Up.
You remember Sammy Morris, the featherweight, who flattened Stanley Meighan and a raft of other fighters around Atlanta, don't you? He's been heard from. He returned to the United States the other day after an extended visit to Australia and has settled at Louisville.

Sammy's last fight in Atlanta was staged with Walk Miller at Five Points. Sammy was a bit of a brawler, but he was not much except in stopping the pellet. The battle started over the amount of money wanted to hand out for the pug's lunch. Walk thought a winner was all Mir was worth. Sammy was a bit of a brawler, but he was not much except in stopping the pellet.

"Wham!" and Sammy started his voyage to Australia, Atlanta's police in hot pursuit.

We are off now, gentlemen, on a tour of investigation of railroad time tables and bulletin boards. The general idea of course, is to make it easier for football fans to map out their journey to Columbus, where everybody's going to see Georgia Auburn settle their discussion Saturday.

Money, excepting marks, is still a pretty pretty item, even in football. Therefore there should be some interest in the rates our brothers in the railroad business are offering this season. The demand is good, but the Atlanta and West Point Railroad company announces that the supply of tickets is unlimited.

Round trip tickets are being sold for $4.10 at the offices of the A. & W. P. That's a bargain price, a regular fire sale. They're worth more, when one considers the entertainment that is waiting at the other end. The railroads announce the festivities in this manner: "What is more inspiring than the banner of your alma mater? That its radiance

INTERESTING PREP GAMES

Boys' High, G. M. A. and Mariet will hold their final workouts for the week this afternoon in the preparation for the games Friday afternoon.

Boys' High and G. M. A. meet Friday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock in their annual football classic and Mariet will clash with Clarksville A. & M. on the Mariet campus. The G. M. A. vs. Boys' High games will be played at Ponce de Leon.

The G. M. A. Boys' High game doesn't radiate the usual color that it had in former years, but it will be a game fully as interesting, if not more so, because of the fact that the teams come nearer being matched than they have been in years. In past seasons the G. M. A. team was the favorite, but now it's different.

Both teams are far below their usual standard, but G. M. A. suffered a greater loss from the squad of last season, thus putting the pair on practically an even basis. Both G. M. A. and Boys' High have only one victory to their credit; each was secured by a six-point margin.

The two squads have been working hard during the week for the coming game, as it will probably mean the loser will hold the cellar position for the year's standing. Boys' High has a wonderful aerial attack, while G. M. A. has just a little edge in the straight football tactics.

Coach Bean has been sending the Mariet eleven through some strenuous workouts for the game with Clarksville A. & M. Friday afternoon. Mariet had an off date last week, but that did not slow the daily practicing.

HUBBARD IS HURT AGAIN

Charlottesville, Va., November 2.—A light workout Monday and Tuesday followed by a harder practice with scrimmage Wednesday made up the opening of Virginia's week of setting the house in readiness to receive the Washington and Lee eleven Saturday.

Oppelman was the only man who played in the Hopkins game last week who was unable to get out for the opening drill Monday but this heavy back was so badly crippled in the closing play of the game Saturday that he had to be taken to the Johns Hopkins hospital and was unable to make his appearance on the field Monday.

In the short scrimmage Monday "Buck" Hubbard, one of the best backs whose injuries had kept him out of the play for three weeks, was able to return to the game. In the first play against the scrubs he carried the ball for ten yards, and when he was again called upon he broke through for 10 yards. But in this play the old strain weakened and he had to be helped limping from the field.

Erce Extra Seats.
While the players were drilling, a corps of carpenters were busy erecting the wooden stand that will be used for the Virginia student body for the game with the Generals. The circus seats that served for part of the crowd at the V. M. I. game will probably do duty at one end of the field.

It was with much regret that the ladies consented to put the date of the game to the test, as the date of the game was in favor of going ahead in spite of the weather.

A greater interest is being taken in the tournaments than was the case at first, for there are nearly twice the number of names up on the entry list for the East Lake tournament than were entered in the Deirdr Ellis matches.

DECATUR ELEVEN MEETS CARTERSVILLE HIGH
The Decatur eleven will meet the Cartersville High team on the football gridiron Friday afternoon at 3 o'clock. Both teams are in fine shape for the game and the battle should be one of the hardest fought of the year.

The demand is good, but the Atlanta and West Point Railroad company announces that the supply of tickets is unlimited.

IOWANS MIGHT DECLINE GAME
Chicago, November 1.—(By the Associated Press).—Iowa's acceptance of the invitation to meet Yale in an intercollegiate football game in the Yale bowl in 1923 probably will be deferred until after the meeting of the western conference faculty committee scheduled to be held here early in December, it was said in athletic circles today.

The western conference rules in regard to intercollegiate games is not iron clad, it was pointed out, and does not absolutely prohibit games with members of the "big three" or other eastern eleven, but was designed primarily, according to football observers, to prohibit games such as Ohio State university undertook when the Buckeyes played California in the annual New Year's day game at Pasadena two years ago.

The faculty representatives in passing the rule, desired to stop the practice of scheduling games that would require long trips and keep players away from their classes too long. It was pointed out that Ohio State university, as an example, could play Yale, Princeton or Harvard or other eastern schools in the same time that it would require to make a trip to Minneapolis for a game with the Gophers.

Major John L. Griffith, commissioner of athletics in the western conference, declined to comment on the Yale invitation, as it is a question for the faculty committee to settle.

Jack Britton Takes Bad Lacing; Champion Saved By Bell in Tenth Round

Hard-hitting Challenger Goes Out After Knockout in Closing Rounds, But Veteran Champ Stages Fine Rally.

BY WESTBROOK PEGLER, (United News Staff Correspondent).
Ringside, Madison Square Garden, N. Y., November 1.—Mickey Walker, 22 years old, pug-nosed, heavy-jawed Jerseyman took away old Jack Britton's world welterweight championship Wednesday night.

He hammered and shamed Jack all over the garden ring for the full distance of a 15-round bout.

The judges gave Walker the decision and there would have been riots and lynchings had they done otherwise. There was no possible shadow of doubt about the result. But the bout was peculiar, taking that aspect from the time the gamblers began to gather in the betting ring outside the main entrance of the arena. The "ring" was where the circus people keep the freaks when the circus is doing its show without any pretense at being anything else but being a circus.

A gambling gentleman who was associated with the Chicago White Sox was in the crowd, and he was peering through a hole in the fence, was conspicuous among the gamblers. And as a result of some very lively questions of the referee, the corner of the last hour or so before Britton entered the ring to make his last stand in defense of the title, the official announced, say that all bets were formally called off. This caused great surprise and much airy comment.

Walker Favored.
Jack Shanley, the featherweight, who is not adverse to turning a few rubles for himself by backing his judgment, came up to the ringside shortly before the fight and said that he believed in Walker. He bet 2 to 1 on Walker to win. For the last few days Britton had been the favorite so this switch in the prices was very interesting indeed.

There appears to be no connection between the gambling phenomenon and the action of the fighters in the ring. Britton simply looked weak and old.

Jack was an elastic cork. On his back there was a sticking plaster about a foot wide. Over the corner there hung a fold of flesh. This spoke no fine condition for the doomed champion, rounding out his 20th year in the ring against a man who was scarcely entering his first "da da" when Britton boxed his first professional show.

Britton's beautiful defense carried him through the first five rounds. He was not very badly punished at any time as punishment is considered by the rough, tough, younger generation of scrappers.

But Walker's strategy was to the body as Jack stood curled up with his arms folded across his middle seemed to weaken the old gent, whereas, a lusty juvenile would not have noticed them. His crazy left clip on the chin caught Jack in the second round as he attacked Britton on the ropes, tumbling the champ for a brief instant.

In the sixth round, with a few seconds of the bell, Jack took a flurry of slams on his middle and then surprised the mob by slowly folding up with his hands before his face and going to his knees and elbows in his own corner.

Britton entered the rings first at 6:50. Mickey Walker was right on his heels, his black patent leather hair parted down the middle, his face spread in a ten-inch grin.

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.
ROUND ONE—Britton tore in and landed a left on the body, following it with a light flourish from both hands. Walker backed to the ropes, where he staggered the champion with a right to the chin. Walker recovered, but Walker kept him near the ropes, hammering furiously with both hands, and then driving the champion to the center of the ring, where he continued to hammer away. Coming from a clinch, Britton caught his opponent along the ropes and landed both hands to the jaw. It was a furious session.

ROUND TWO—Britton began the second round carefully, planting his left into the challenger's stomach and cleverly getting away, making Walker miss. Britton tripped near Walker's corner and fell to both knees, but was up in a flash. Walker caught the champion with a right to the head and as Britton wobbled, Walker followed with his left, but the champion steeled, and they were clinched at the bell.

ROUND THREE—They began the third round cautiously and maintained at close quarters. Walker took the lead, hooking his long left arm in front of him and the champion retreated. Walker, using his left, pushed Britton to the ropes, and the champion again clinched. Walker blocked most of Britton's blows and in addition the champion lacked nerve.

ROUND FOUR—They began with long-distance sparring, but soon Walker planted his left in Britton's stomach and the champion's long arms were left to the head and evaded the returns. Britton caught Walker in a neutral corner and pummed both hands to head and body, continuing after the bell rang until stopped by the referee.

ROUND FIVE—Britton appeared stronger and more sure of himself and took the lead more. He again caught Walker in a corner and landed short uppercuts and an over-hand right and knocked Walker to the ropes. Walker missed several swings.

Relations Severed.
Akron, Ohio, November 1.—All athletic relations between Akron university and Case School of Applied Science of Cleveland have been broken off indefinitely, effective immediately, it was announced today by Professor Charles E. Bulger, president of the university's athletic association.

Professor Bulger refused to comment on the reason, but it is understood that remarks made concerning the sportsmanship of the local team in a football game with Case several weeks ago was the cause.

IOWANS MIGHT DECLINE GAME
Chicago, November 1.—(By the Associated Press).—Iowa's acceptance of the invitation to meet Yale in an intercollegiate football game in the Yale bowl in 1923 probably will be deferred until after the meeting of the western conference faculty committee scheduled to be held here early in December, it was said in athletic circles today.

GREATEST GRID MACHINE IN YEARS
Chicago, November 1.—Michigan, headed toward a western conference championship, with one of the greatest gridiron machines "Hurricane" is the only major college team in the country whose eleven has not been scored on this season, according to a recapitulation of records to date. The Wolverines were held to a scoreless tie by the southern team, Vanderbilt, but came out decisively from Case (Ohio State and Illinois, the latter two being conference opponents).

THE INVISIBLE HUSBAND

INSTALLMENT NO. 34.

A Desperate Scene.
"What sort of business is this?" an ugly voice interrupted.
Deborah shivered out of Larry's arms to meet face to face—Phyllis Gay!
"You're having a fine time in the mountains, aren't you?" Phyllis sneered—then she turned to Larry angrily, "and I thought you were going to see about getting me a room. What do you mean leaving me alone in this place while you and this girl—? uh! I'm sorry I came."
Larry attempted to calm Phyllis, but she went off into fits of grief and rage, and talked and screamed so loudly that old Jacob and Emma were concerned for the good name of their tavern when she came tearing in!
"It's no room you'll get in my house! It's a crazy woman you are!" the landlord's wife complained. "As for you, Mr. Demarest, you brought this lady here, and unless you take her away, you'll not be welcome to your room here either."
Phyllis burst into another tirade.

and Larry in desperation took her into his arms and attempted to soothe her, quite in the careless, impersonal style he employed in their scenes in the movies.

"There, there, old girl, buck up!
This is no way to act!"
"I'm going to die, I tell you. I can't stand this!" Phyllis moaned all the while old Emma was trying to hedge her out of the front door, and Jacob began pushing all the chairs out of the hall so that she wouldn't have another convenient place to collapse.

Deborah, meantime, was transfixed.
Why had Phyllis come? And with Larry?

What were they to each other?
Phyllis had admitted she was in love with him, but what about him? He was holding her in his arms, still pleading—

"See here, Phyllis old dear, brace up! Buck up! That's a good girl—now smile at me. What's the cyclone about anyway? Jealous of Finken-berg?"

Phyllis drew away and gave Larry a stinging glance that any director would have featured in a reel. "It's not jealous I am Larry—it's worse than that—I'm desperate! I think I'll go on this way, and I've got to—"

"Yes, yes, I know," he hurried on.
"You told me in New York. You wanted to come out here and watch this little girl make the mountain scene. Well, I brought you, didn't I? What more could I do? If you had kept quiet you'd have gotten a nice room—Jacob might have brought us some supper and—"

"And what?" Phyllis blazed. "All the way up you've been talking about this little girl, and now—what do I find? The minute I turn my back you two are making love out there!"
Such a scolding conduct, I've never seen, and I give you my word, I've seen a lot!"

Larry flushed with anger, and Deborah turned to leave the room.
"Oh, it's all right for both of you to appear innocent, but I tell you no company I work for is going to tolerate anything like this! I'm still the leading lady of the Star Film company—I still have a contract for two years, and you're still my leading man Larry Demarest, don't forget that! And also don't forget that you have a clause not to marry or—"

"Not to marry!" Deborah gasped before she could check herself.
"Yes, to marry!" Phyllis mimicked. "But as far as you or your likes are concerned, you need n't worry about that! Larry Demarrest isn't getting tied up to any shop girls—not this season—not while he's my leading man anyway!"

"See here," Demarest began warmly, but Phyllis continued to stamp and tirade, until finally Bertie and Fritz came down to inquire what was the row.

"Heavens, Phyllis, how did you get here?" Bertie welcomed in amazement.

"I motored with Larry," Phyllis said rather sweetly, controlling her temper just long enough to taunt Deborah with the suggestion of the pleasant ride.

"Pon my soul, that's great. Does Fink know you're here?" Fritz asked practically.

"Finkenberg he hanged, I'm here to see about this girl—this bold little imp that I caught making love to Larry right here before my very eyes!
I ask you is she going to have that part in the mountain picture? Do you want me to quit and leave you flat in the middle of 'The Crimson Sin'?" That's exactly what I'll do if she gets it!"

Fritz laughed again. "Come now, Philly! This isn't a place to do business, is it? You're the boss of the Star Film, but this is a new picture we're trying out for Larry.
Fink thinks Larry is getting big enough to work alone now—at least, we're trying this one."

"And this girl is going to play opposite him?"

"Well, yes—and no. You see, there's no vamp in this scenario—that is pardon! There is no part big enough for you, Phyllis. It's simply a story of the backwoods, the 'silent appeal of a mountain girl,' and the happy fade-out. You know the stuff—you said yourself you couldn't be bored with it—no gowns."

"Darn these gowns! All I want to know is this—Larry Demarest my leading man? Has he a contract with the Star Film company to play opposite me or not?"

"I did have, Miss Gay," Larry interrupted. "I've supported you for two seasons, and I've tried to do my best, but I was notified by Finken-berg the other day that my contract had been cashed in. After the Crimson Sin, I am to star in my own right.
This is my first picture, and Miss Gay, that Mrs. . . . the little girl over there . . . is going to play the part because lady of the type, that's all."

"That's all?"

"Yes, Miss Gay. I believe that's all.
I regret to add that I believe you will make a better actress than you ever were, and when you saw me kissing her a while ago, it was just after I had asked her to marry me. I guess that's enough to satisfy you all—so goodnight!"

Fritz and Bertie took Phyllis in hand as another fit of anger nosed.

ed her. Deborah, whose heart had leaped into heaven with Larry's last words, waited on the landing to meet him as he came upstairs. He took her in his arms fondly, but did not kiss her again.
"What—what made you say that?"
she whispered.
"I don't know," Larry breathed, as he tried to look into her eyes and convince himself that he was not delirious. "I don't know why I said it, but I meant it—I will you marry me?"
In tomorrow's installment with Larry as a lover, and Finkenberg besieging her, Deborah has a problem.

American Artist Opens Season With Success

There is little dispute that Fritz Kreiser stands at the forefront of contemporary violinists in that highest expression of genius wherein the soul speaks through the music. But at least once Tuesday night, and possibly twice, Francis MacMillen, American, and an undisputed one of the elect among artists, may be said to have reached similar heights of spiritual power. The particular instance was the "Andante of the Symphonie Espagnole" by Lalo, and the other was his opening piece, "A Romance" by Sinding.

Mr. MacMillen indicated before he drew the bow across the string that he was no blind follower of tradition, where he could, in his own opinion, improve upon tradition, for he did not put his symphony first, but wisely led up to it, giving his audience first a chance to become thoroughly in touch with the player, and himself quite sure of his audience.

The Sinding "Romance" was thus an ingratiating thing, by which it is not meant that it was a good thing to accompany one's getting settled in one's seat and giving the usual glance around to see if the same people who had season tickets in the neighborhood were in their accustomed seats.
On the contrary, it drew to itself the "Romance," and held the most sensitive enjoyment, while the Pugnani trio and allegro which followed, an arrangement by Kreiser, was an exciting and absorbing technical study done with a fullness of power that was almost defiant in its confidence.

And if the first number filled one with an ingenueness of delight that tempted one to cry out like a freshman in music, "Oh, I wish we could hear that again!" the encore that followed the first group was just this downright thought of happiness, light as air.

And then there was that style of Mr. MacMillen's which was embodied partly in his music and partly in his face, when he played a thing like the rondo of Lalo's symphony—a kind of super-seriousness under which all was smiles.

The romance and the marvelous rhythmic charm of the "Polonaise" in D major, by Wieniawski, the violinist shot all through with the brilliance and the high color that becomes this music. A high light in the concert was the eloquence of the introduction to the "Tarantelle of Sarasate," and in the last he revealed again, as he had many times during the evening, his indisputable claims to splendid virtuosity. The "Scotch Pastorale," like his Schubert "Ave Maria," which was an encore, the deeply poetic side of the violinist's immagination. A "Barcarolle" of his own he had to repeat.

All of this comment would seem to indicate some enthusiasm over the art of MacMillen, and rightly so. He pleased his audience even in his appearance, for he is tall and slender, and holds himself well, with a toss of the mane occasionally that is like the gesture of a thoroughbred and a racer, when he has won what he set out to win. Even a mannerism of Mr. Mac-Millen's pleased his house: his so thorough entrance into the feeling of the work in hand, that when the score left the pianist to play alone for a few bars, the violinist kept time with his bow, and one felt with his whole being, all unconscious of the transparency of it.

He has the good fortune to possess a marvellous instrument, a Stradivarious of rarest qualities, and his mastery of it is worthy the instrument.
As fine as gossamer silk, it someone called his tone when he played with muted strings, and yet the echo that lingers most lovingly in the mind is the full tone and flowing sweetness of his large, or the floating, singing quality of his work in cantabile passages.
To round it out, who could resist the clean-cut glimmer of his effects of pure virtuosity?

Hugh Rideout at the piano was that level of an accompanist, a support, and not an intrusion.

The audience was one of splendid appreciation, but not as large as the occurrence of the artistically should have assembled. Incidentally a new back curtain in Batik tapestry style, was the best bit of background the Auditorium had. The evening concert opened the civic series of the music club.

Poppy Day Plans To Be Formed.

Preparations for America's annual Poppy day sale will be completed on Friday morning, November 3, at a meeting of the committee headed by Mrs. E. M. Boykin. The meeting is called for 11 o'clock in the president's office of the Atlanta Woman's club and all who anticipate having a part in this worthy undertaking are asked to be present.

Poppies to be sold on the streets by members of this committee, wearing American Legion badges, are to be sent previous to the sale to Mrs. Arthur Henry Hazzard, 70 West Eleventh street, who will check them out for sale on the streets. Mrs. E.
E. Huguley and Mrs. Rufus Barnett will be in charge of the selling committee and all notices to be published and all publicity will be handled through the Atlanta Woman's club by Mrs. McCord Roberts.

Drama League Study Class.

Owing to the fact that the Drama League luncheon is scheduled for Friday, Mrs. Boyd asks the study class to meet Thursday morning of this week at 10:30 at Edison hall. She will not read a play but will read, instead, certain mediaeval Russian heroic epics that still survive orally in northern parts of Russia, and her novel, by Gogol, especially "Dead Souls," that show conditions of life in later Russia.
The hero stories rival the Celtic ones collected by Lady Gregory in the imaginative beauty. Anyone interested may be present at this meeting.

Halloween Dance At Cascade Terrace.

A lovely event of Saturday evening was a Halloween dance given by Miss Ruth Norris and Carl Faires, Jr., at Cascade terrace.

The ballroom was effectively decorated with hanging moss and lighted by pumpkin lanterns shaded with attractive streamers. Encircling the walls were black paper cats, bats and witches. In the doorway of the ballroom was a portiere of yellow and black streamers with dancing witches and cat heads.

Mrs. Corbella Hart and Mrs. C. F.
Faires assisted in the entertainment of the guests.

Every WomanWooldridge-Everett Wedding
Is Ceremony of Rare Beauty

A setting of rare beauty was provided for the wedding of Miss Mary Wooldridge and Willis M. Everett, Jr., which took place Wednesday evening at 9 o'clock, at the residence of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Campbell Wooldridge, at the Georgian Terrace.

The palm room at the south end of the hotel was the scene of the ceremony, which had its background in a luxury of palms with cathedral canopies and white flowers, while four great golden harps, used to furnish an ethereal and beautiful musical accompaniment to the entrance of the bride and the marriage vows, lent themselves effectively also to the pictorial setting.

The bride and her attendants, entering from the far end of the long room, passed its whole length through an aisle formed by white standards, between which were passed festoons of similar, and each standard was surmounted by a cluster of white chrysanthemums, tied with tulle. The lower end of the apartment, which forms a circular alcove reaching into the second story, was massed to its height with foliage plants and smilax. White candles in cathedral candelabra rose out of the palms at altar height, and alternating with the lights were white floor baskets of white chrysanthemums. The harp players, headed by Mrs. Mary Griffith Dobbs, were seated in white.

The bride entered with her father, and the groom through another door with his best man, Murry Shoun. The bride's attendants were the groom's sisters, Miss Mary Louise Everett, maid of honor and Mrs. Monroe Pointer, of Como, Miss, and Mrs. Campbell Wooldridge, Miss Celeste Dunston and Miss Polly Jeffries, of Memphis. Joseph Rogers and Frank Tidwell were groomsmen and the ushers were Stephens Mitchell, Leslie Nichols, Rufus Davidson and Jack Caldwell. Alexander Patton Mitchell was ring bearer.

Dr. J. Strode Lyon was the minister officiating, with Dr. J. W. Caldwell, Jr., assisting.

A Charming Bride.
The bride wore most becomingly the traditional bridal costume, which brought out her pure blond coloring. Her gown was one of richness and elaboration, its material white broadcloth silver cloth combined with an embroidery in crystal beads and rhinestones on silver cloth. Short side trains were of silver cloth caught at the girdle with orange blossoms and the court train was of tulle to the waist line when it merged into broad metal cloth embroidered on with crystals and rhinestones. The tulle veil hung from a coronet of tulle embroidered in rhinestone and crystal and was finished at the back with a half-wreath of orange blossoms. The bridal bouquet was of the bride's roses and valley lilies in cascade effect with a shower of lilies.

Mrs. Wooldridge wore pink metal lace over pink silver cloth, her bouquet of pink roses showered with blue flowers. The other attendants wore pink chiffon velvet with silver metal trails and they carried arm baskets of pink roses showered with flowers in the pastel shades.

The ring bearer wore a French velvet suit of colonial style with black patent leather slippers and rhinestone buckles.

The Reception.
A reception followed the ceremony and Mr. and Mrs. Wooldridge were assisted in receiving by Mr. and Mrs. W. M. Everett, Messrs. W. W. Banks, Thomas W. Hardwick, Albert Dunson, W. C. Lyle, W. C. Jarnigan, W. M. Camp, Joseph Billups, Jesse N. Couch, Charles Northern, Messrs. P. Coolidge, J. P. B. Allen, Robert Harvey and Miss Louise Dooly. Miss Erskine Jarnigan and Miss Hallie Poole registered the guests in the bride's book.

The wedding supper was served from the smaller palm room adjoining, which was made a bower of foliage and lighted by floor and table lights becomingly shaded. The center table had as its main decoration a great blue bowl of pink roses and its candelsticks were of the same Italian ware in blue. Punch was served from another table, the bowl imbedded in ferns and roses. The lace was bride's slippers, and individual bride cakes were embossed with valley lilies.

Wedding Journey.
Mr. and Mrs. Everett left during the evening for Grove Park Inn, Asheville, and returning will make their home with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Willis M. Everett, on Piedmont avenue.

Their wedding, while it was not large, held the interest of a large acquaintance in Atlanta and in Memphis, the former home of the bride. A debutante only last season, she has been one of the most feted and admired young women in the social life. Mr. Everett, too, has a host of friends and is successfully engaged in the practice of law with his father.

Miss Watson Weds
William S. Temple.

The marriage of Miss Marjorie Watson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William W. Watson, of Washington, D. C., to William S. Temple, Jr., of Atlanta, formerly of Hattiesburg, Miss., took place at the National Cathedral, in Washington, D. C., on October 24, at 2:30 o'clock in the afternoon, Canon W. L. DeVries officiating.

Miss Rynza Scott acted as maid of honor, and Henry W. Longfellow was best man. Immediately following the ceremony Mr. Temple and his bride left for Atlanta, where they will make their home in the Goldsmith apartments, 24 East Eighth street, until after the first of the year when they will reside in Hattiesburg, Miss.

Mrs. Temple, until five years ago, made her home in Hattiesburg, and since that time she has resided in Washington, where she is prominently identified with the social life of the capital. She completed her education at the University of Virginia, where she specialized in voice and was a member of the Alpha Chi Omega. Mr. Temple is the son of Mr. and Mrs. William S. Temple, of Hattiesburg, Miss. He attended school at Georgia Tech, where he graduated and was a member of the Beta Theta Pi fraternity and other school organizations. Blount-Belser Wedding Is Quiet Ceremony at Home

The marriage of Miss Caroline Garrett Blount, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. B. M. Blount, and Dana Collins Belser was solemnized quietly on Wednesday, November 1, at 12:30 o'clock at the home of the bride's parents on Piedmont avenue, the Rev. W. W. Menninger, pastor of the All Saints' Episcopal church, officiating.

The house was decorated by palms and French floor baskets of chrysanthemums. The ceremony took place in the living room before an improvised altar of palms and tall white floor baskets filled with white chrysanthemums. Southern smilax veiled the lights, and white satin ribbons and white chrysanthemums showered the bride. An orchestra rendered the music.

Bridal Party.
The little ribbon bearers carrying the white satin ribbon streamers, which marked an aisle for the bride party, were Caroline Duncan, Florida Ferrell Hill, Mary Duncan and Boyd Blount. The little girls wore salmon two-toned tulle, trimmed with flowers of the same material.

Miss Blanche Davis, maid of honor, wore a beautiful gown of sand-colored crepe made with flowing sleeves of silk Oriental embroidery. The draped skirt was held by an ornament of cream-colored beads. Her hat was of black velvet, trimmed with coque feathers, and she carried a cascade bouquet of pink and yellow roses, showered with Parma violets, lavender ageratum and valley lilies.

Mrs. Joseph Fitzsimmons, of Charlotte, N. C., matron of honor, wore sand-colored prunella crepe, trimmed with bands of black fur. Her hat was of black velvet and she carried a bouquet in cascade effect of pink and yellow roses, showered with Parma violets, lavender ageratum and valley lilies.

Buchanan-Ruth Wedding Is Brilliant Home Event

A beautiful home wedding of sincere interest to a wide circle of friends was that of Miss Lola Mary Buchanan and Lester Rufus Ruth, of Alliance, Ohio, which was solemnized at 8:30 o'clock Wednesday evening at the home of the bride's parents in Kirkwood.

The impressive ceremony was performed by Rev. F. H. Belk, of the Trinity Methodist church, in the presence of a large assembly of relatives and friends.

Mrs. Al Tates sang "At Dawning" before the ceremony. The music of an orchestra accompanied the ceremony and the reception.

Beautiful Decorations.
Throughout the home there were artistic decorations and a profusion of flowers and smilax together with stately palms and potted plants. The hallway and living room were given the appropriate atmosphere of beauty and impressiveness in the effective arrangement of southern smilax and white roses. Bowers of roses hung from the double doors and the beamed ceilings of the rooms were veritably an improvised altar of handsome palms and smilax, the luxury of the foliage relieved by white lilies and the white of tall candles in two cathedral candelabra.

The little ribbon bearers were Elaine and Elaine Street, nieces of the bride. Their exquisite frocks were of orchid colored georgette, trimmed with wheels of pleated orchid-colored ribbon. They carried bouquets of Premier roses.

Little Carol Quillian, the daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Garnett Quillian, was flower girl. She wore a dainty frock of white georgette and lace, and carried an exquisite white lace basket filled with pink roses.

Mrs. W. O. Street, only sister of the bride, was her matron of honor. She wore a handsome gown of orchid-colored panne velvet fashioned with a draped skirt whose folds were caught with an amethyst ornament, and a train at one side. She carried an arm bouquet of pink Premier roses showered with lavender buds.

Dr. Garnett Quillian acted as best man.

Beautiful Bride.
The beautiful bride entered with her brother, Linton Buchanan, who gave her in marriage, and afforded a lovely picture in her wedding costume of white panne velvet enriched with pearls. Strings of pearls fell below the hem of the draped skirt which was held in place by pearl ornaments. The long train of white panne velvet hung gracefully from the shoulders and was outlined with seed pearls.

The veil of imported venetian point lace was caught to her hair by a coronet of orange blossoms. Her only ornament was a platinum and diamond wrist watch, a gift of Mr. Ruth. She wore a corsage of orchids and valley lilies.

An elaborate reception followed the ceremony.

The Bride's Table.
In the dining room the color scheme of pink and lavender was effectively carried out. The lace-covered table had as a central decoration a large three-tier wedding cake from the center of which tulle streamers of pink and orchid color proceeded to the four corners of the table where they terminated in four big fluffy bows.

Around the wedding cake was a mound of pink roses and encircling this were four silver candelsticks holding unshaded pink tapers.

Mrs. E. M. Buchanan, mother of the bride, wore a handsome gown of grey lace over silver cloth and a corsage of violets and zardinas. Assisting in entertaining the guests were a group of the bride's friends, including Miss Mary Frances Barnhart, Miss Ethel Smith, Miss Lois Verrier, Miss Helen Gamble, Miss Celia Britt, Mrs. Allen Jernigan and Miss Kathleen Wilson, of Winder, Ga.

Later in the evening, Mr. and Mrs. Ruth left for a wedding trip to New York and other points east. They will be at home later at Alliance, Ohio.

The bride is the beautiful and attractive daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. M. Buchanan. She was educated at Washington seminary and is a young woman of unusual charm and personality, she has a wide circle of friends here.

Mr. Ruth is a graduate of Mount Union college, in Ohio, and is a member of the Alpha Tau Omega fraternity. He is assistant editor of The Alliance Review.

Inman Park Club Will Meet.

Here is a home-made syrup which millions of people have found to be the most dependable means of breaking up stubborn coughs. It is cheap and simple, but very prompt in action. Under its healing, soothing influence, chest soreness goes, phlegm loosens, breathing becomes easy, tickling in throat stops and you get a good night's restful sleep. The usual cough and chest colds are conquered by it in 24 hours or less. Nothing better for bronchitis, hoarseness, croup, throat tickle, bronchial asthma or whooping cough. To make this splendid cough syrup, pour 2½ ounces of Pinex into a pint bottle and fill the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup and shake thoroughly. If you prefer use clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup, instead of sugar syrup. Either way, you get a full pint—a family supply—of much better cough syrup than you could buy ready-made for three times the money. Keep it perfectly safe for future use. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or your money promptly refunded. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

Simple Way to Get Rid of Blackheads

There is one simple, safe and sure way that never fails to get rid of blackheads, that is to dissolve them. To do this get two ounces of calomel powder from any drug store—sprinkle a little on a hot, wet cloth—rub over the blackheads briskly—wash the parts and you will be surprised how the blackheads have disappeared. Big blackheads, little blackheads, no matter where they are, simply dissolve and disappear. Blackheads are simply a mixture of dirt and dirt and secretions that form in the pores of the skin. The calomel powder and the water dissolve the blackheads so they wash right out, leaving the pores free and clean and in their natural condition.—(adv.)

Hips, Back and Legs would Have That Tired Ache

Everett, Washington.—"For several years I have had trouble with the lowest part of my back and my hips and my legs would ache with that tired ache, could hardly stand on my feet at times. I was always able to do my work although I did not feel good. I saw Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound advertised and having heard several praises it decided to try it. I feel better at the present time. It has done wonders for me and I keep it in the house right along. I always recommend it to others who are sick and ailing."—Mrs. J. M. SIBBERT, 6022 High St., Everett, Washington.

To do any kind of work, or to play for that matter, is next to impossible if you are suffering from some form of female trouble. It may cause your back or your legs to ache, it may make you nervous and irritable. You may be able to keep up and around, but you do not feel good. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is a medicine for women. It is especially adapted to relieve the cause of the trouble and these annoying pains, aches and "no good" feelings disappear.

New Book by Corra Harris; Meeting of Music Club

BY LOUISE DOOLY.

The brief visit of Mrs. Corra Harris to the Georgian Terrace just now calls attention to the proper pride George women take in this outstanding woman among them.

Every book Mrs. Harris sells now—and she turns out an astonishing amount of work during the year—means a check well up in the neighborhood of five figures, not counting royalties.

The part that the women of Georgia are particularly proud of is that while Mrs. Harris produces best sellers, she does not go down into the mire of sex glorification and the sophistry that takes the place of solid moral philosophy and old-time religious principle. Her books that people will read, life characters are normal human beings, not psychiatric exhibits, and their romances, their tragedies, when one has read them, leave a wholesome taste in the mouth.

The Music Club. It was as gay as a birthday party yesterday with flowers and a new stage curtain and the enthusiasm of a first fall meeting when the Music club reconvened formally for its Wednesday morning meetings after a long summer's rest.

The personality of Mrs. Armand Carroll was quite equal to holding its own with the enthusiasm and red chrysanthemums near her when she presided as chairman of the day's program, which she had created and which was delightful out of the ordinary, much of it exploiting master composers in their hours of relaxation, when they let their creative imagination run to frivolity.

The Music club holds a big place in Atlanta's organization life with its three-fold cultural, educational and civic.

The new administration, headed by Mrs. Delos Hart, has aggressive plans for the year and Miss Nan Stephens, concert director, has contracted for a season's concert program which is exceptionally well made, varying from Mozart comic opera to the Denishawn dancers, with an appeal to every kind of taste—that is, every kind of good taste.

—Mrs. David Wise.

Mrs. David Wise will preside at the monthly luncheon today of the Parent-Teacher Presidents' club at Hotel Ansley. Mrs. Wise is a New York woman, not so very long a resident of Atlanta, but she has entered with such whole-souled enthusiasm into P.T.A. activities, and her ability was so quickly recognized, that she was soon put at the head of her own association—Formwalt school—and at the head of the President's club.

This last is nominally a purely social institution, but it proves most useful to actual P.T.A. work in the opportunity it affords for informal exchange of ideas and the clearing of sometimes disputed points.

Mrs. Weed of Savannah.

Americanization is the diversion of federation club work which Mrs. Hays, the state president, has recently appointed Mrs. Henry D. Weed, of Savannah, to undertake, and Mrs. F. Weed, spending a few days at the Georgian Terrace this week, has apparently gone into her work with enthusiasm.

"While we have comparatively few foreigners resident in Georgia," said Mrs. Weed, "yet the work of Americanization in its broad sense of educating for good citizenship has a wide field in Georgia. The women, I believe, do much in creating the sentiment for neighborliness, brotherhood, tolerance, law observance and law enforcement, which will belong under the heads of the remaking of good Americans."

Mrs. Weed, who is president of the Savannah Federation of Clubs, motored to Atlanta for a short stay, accompanied by Mrs. Stewart Craft, of Virginia.

Miss Baxter, Toastmaster.

Miss Alice Baxter is getting to be a professional toastmaster and after-dinner speaker. It is just another case of the danger of making a success of a thing. You are apt to be kept at it the rest of your life.

There is no question that after-luncheon talks will be a feature of the luncheon Miss Baxter gives today at the Daughters of the Confederacy Chapter house, in her capacity as chairman of the history for the history of Atlanta chapter which Mrs. T. Stevens is general chairman to compile. All the women invited are good talkers and Miss Baxter will not spare them.

The writers of sketches for the history who will enjoy Miss Baxter's hospitality are Mrs. J. K. Ottley, whose sketch will be "Confederate Battle Hymns and Songs," Mrs. A. O. Woodward, the "Confederate Day at the Southern States Exposition," Mrs. A. D. Wilson, "Confederate Memorial Day," Mrs. Joseph Morgan, "Confederate Sentiment," Mrs. G. Warner, "U. S. C. Conventions—State and General," Miss Eliza, both Hanna, "Chapter Historical Work," Mrs. Howard McCall, medical essay contest; Mrs. C. Helen Paine, "Our Great Confederate Memorial," Mrs. C. N. Davis, "Children of the Confederacy," Mrs. W. S. Coleman, "Confederate Markers," Mrs. C. T. Phillips, "World War Soldiers' Confederate Cemetery," Mrs. T. T. Stevens, "Atlanta Chapter and the World War." The history of the chapter will be issued in the latter part of November and will be a record of achievement for 27 years.

Ethics and the Stage.

The five stars of the dramatic stage who will be honored by the Drama league with a luncheon Friday at the Capital City club are, in the words of the league's president, "The five stars of the drama, not only among the most famous players on the American stage, but they have all been associated with a rather ethical type of drama and stage ethics."

The Drama league honors itself therefore in extending them a special welcome.

Amelia Bingham, Norman Hackett, Charlotte Walker, Henry Dixey, Wilton Lackaye—a heartening prospect their contribution offers for a rare experience in modern drama.

Calls Meeting.

Mrs. B. M. Boykin requests all members of the committee having charge of the sale of tickets for the Atlanta Women's club lecture course to meet with her in the president's office on Friday morning at 10 o'clock.

As there will not be a meeting of the executive board, there will be time enough on that morning to outline further plans for the promotion of this fine cultural opportunity. The course offers a series of seven lectures to be delivered by men and women of national and international fame on subjects dealing with concrete and abstract questions of the day.

The series will open on November 22 with a striking address on Russia delivered by Tom Skehill from first hand knowledge. Mr. Skehill spent the summer in Europe and much of that time was devoted to Russia. Mr. Skehill is a speaker whose reputation for fiery eloquence is of international character.

Following Mr. Skehill will be Ruth Bryan Owens, Villiamur Stefans-Albert, Allen D. Albert, Dr. Parker Cadman, Ida Tarbell and Glenn Frank.

Plans Are Perfected For Forget-Me-Not Drive

A large and enthusiastic body of women assembled at the Daffodil tea room Wednesday afternoon to perfect plans for the launching of the Forget-me-not drive in Atlanta on Saturday, November 4.

Mrs. Irvin S. Thomas, general chairman of the War Mothers' division, which is sponsoring this drive, presided.

Mrs. Thomas opened the meeting with an interesting talk, outlining the plans of the drive. She paid a beautiful tribute to Mrs. Sam D. Jones, president of the War Mothers, and regretted her inability on account of ill health to participate actively in this drive as she did last year.

Mrs. Thomas introduced Dr. Louis Prosserman, state chairman for Forget-me-not day, who gave an illuminating talk about the specific plans and purposes of the organization represented by him. He introduced Dr. Henry Alford Porter, pastor of the Second Baptist church, who made an inspirational address in behalf of the disabled soldiers, whose cause these women are sponsoring.

The keynote was a clarion call for remembrance of the boys who answered the country's call and gave their best, that the country might preserve her ideals, and be a safe place in which to rear the children. He said that this day is distinctly consecrated to sacrifice, and made an eloquent plea that Atlanta remember Forget-me-not day.

An address was also made by L. Frierson, state commander. Boy Scouts will assist. Headquarters for supplies at Sharp & Boyston, corner Forsyth and James streets.

D. J. D. Club to Meet On Saturday.

Mother To-Be!

Do You Realize this Fact?

An eminent physician has shown why there is so much useless suffering on the part of many expectant mothers, for months before baby comes, as well as when baby actually arrives. This same great doctor found the way to avoid much of this suffering. Mother, your baby's nerves, its whole structure should be free from any influence caused by your months of useless misery and pain. You yourself can be free from much of it. Here is a little message to all expectant mothers:

Mrs. Ida Milton, 108 N. Tremont St., Kansas, Ill., says: "I am forced to say something in regard to your wonderful 'Mother's Friend.' Just one application gave me such relief I could hardly realize I was in pregnancy. Before I used it I was suffering with pains all over, and today, I am able to do my house-work with all ease and without pain."

"Mother's Friend" is applied externally, and enables the muscles, nerves and tissues to relax and readjust themselves with the growing changes during pregnancy, and at child-birth. It should be used for some time before baby comes—the sooner the better.

SEVEN AGES GIVE REQUEST NUMBERS

"Dream of Heaven," "Waltz of Aces" and "Low Down Blues" Feature Concert by Aces.

Warner's Seven Aces, The Atlanta Constitution orchestra, last night had more requests than they have ever before received in one night as they played from Station WGM. These requests demonstrated the deep interest listeners in Atlanta especially are taking in the music of the Aces.

From the time the Aces started playing at 6:15 o'clock, after the two piano numbers by Aloys Kremer, of Cox college, the telephone in Station WGM kept up an almost constant ringing that was broken only by the time that was taking when listeners were naming their favorite numbers.

The beauty of an orchestra with the talent of Warner's Seven Aces is that such an organization is always ready with the best arrangements of the latest music. And original numbers count for much in playing of Warner's Aces.

Last night's two original numbers were offered by the Aces. Both are old favorites with dancers of Atlanta and with the listeners to Station WGM. The program was opened with one of them, "Low Down Blues," which features J. E. Pratt, Jr., C. J. Buckner and Bob Pittman. The other original number was "Waltz of the Aces," a number that was originated by B. H. Warner, director of the Aces, and which, of course, features Ralph Bennett, violinist.

During the concert a number of people asked for "Naughty Sweetie Blues," and "Dream of Heaven," a waltz, and were given the first selection about three minutes' notice.

The other offerings of the Aces last night was "I'll Build a Stairway to Paradise," from the "George White Scandals of New York," are featuring Tom Brannin, trumpeter.

ALOYS KREMER PLAYS FOR WGM LISTENERS

New Member of Cox College Faculty Heard by Radio.

Last night at 6 o'clock listeners to Station WGM were given two excellent piano solos by Aloys Kremer, pianist and member of the Cox college faculty. Mr. Kremer appears in recital tonight at Eggleston hall. He is presented to the Atlanta music-loving public in his recital tonight by the Atlanta Conservatory of Music.

Mr. Kremer's talent as a pianist was clearly demonstrated last evening to those of WGM's listeners who heard his remarkable work at the piano.

He played two numbers on the program last night, being at the piano nearly 20 minutes. His first selection was Chopin's "Polonaise" in A flat, while for his second offering he presented Rachmaninoff's "Prelude" in C sharp minor.

Says Wife Cursed Him and Undermined Health; Gets Divorce

Savannah, Ga., November 1.—A jury in the Chatham county superior court on Tuesday afternoon granted James E. White a divorce from his wife, Mrs. Celeste White, on grounds of cruel treatment. While alleging his wife cursed at him, the plaintiff on the stand in effect told the jury the curfew by his wife was undermining his health. The jury was read the law on the subject of cruel treatment by Judge McElmer and, after a brief deliberation, granted the divorce.

LESSON NO. 159. Magnetic Chargers for Storage Batteries.

Practically every modern receiving set which utilizes vacuum tubes for detection and amplifying purposes makes use of a storage battery as the source of energy for heating the filament to the proper temperature. In order to keep the battery in first-class operating condition it must be recharged from an external source. Ordinarily a source of direct current is employed for charging storage batteries, but numerous "magnetic rectifiers" have appeared on the market by means of which the ordinary six-volt battery may be recharged from the 60-cycle, 110-volt house lighting circuit.

There are numerous forms of the magnetic rectifier, but they all operate on the same principle, that is, the circuit through the battery is closed during a portion of each cycle so that the current from the charging source flows through the battery in the same direction during the time the circuit is closed.

The diagram illustrates one form of battery charger for operation on a 60-cycle, 110-volt line, such as commonly employed for house lighting purposes. It consists of an iron core step-down transformer for reducing the voltage to a suitable value for charging a six-volt battery. The transformer is ordinarily employed for filament lighting purposes, and the magnets which actuate the vibrating contact, "P" and "S" represent the primary and secondary, respectively, of the step-down transformer. "A" is the ammeter, which indicates the rate at which the battery is being charged. The meter gives a slight reading in the opposite direction before the line switch is thrown, due to the current flowing from the battery through the windings of the electromagnet. "L-1" is a polarizing electromagnet which pulls on the vibrating armature "L-2," but insufficiently to close the contacts. When the line switch is closed, one-half of the cycle flows through the winding of the electromagnet "L-2" in such a way as to aid the pull of the magnet "L-1," so that the armature "L-2" is pulled over and the contacts closed, shortening the magnet windings and allowing current to flow into the battery until the pull on the armature is diminished by a change in the direction of the current in the coil "L-2" due to a reversal in the cycle. This procedure is repeated at the frequency of the alternating supply the armature being adjusted so that it vibrates in synchronism with the reversals in direction of current flow. The contacts are thus closed during only a portion of each cycle and the battery receives small portions of current in the same direction at each closing of the circuit.

While it appears that only half of the cycle is being used and the other half wasted, in reality the devices are usually about 75 per cent efficient as during the interval when the contacts are not closed current is taken from the line merely to overcome the losses in the transformer, which are very small.

In some types of charges the coil "L-1" is replaced by a large permanent magnet in which case care must be exercised to connect the battery with proper polarity to the terminals "B." In the type shown in the diagram it makes no difference which way the battery is connected to the device, since the coil "L-1" is polarized by the battery.

400-Meter Class B License Granted to Station WGM

Station WGM, The Atlanta Constitution, last night entered "Class B." Beginning last night, November 1, listeners to Station WGM found The Atlanta Constitution on 400 meters.

Station WGM's license placing The Atlanta Constitution on the list of class B broadcasting stations was received yesterday and at both 6 and 9:30 o'clock listeners received the Constitution on 400 meters.

Class B is a new class just created by the department of commerce to reduce interference between broadcasting stations. The conditions which a station must meet to become class B station are definite and require that only the best equipment available is in use.

In order to obtain such a license a broadcasting station must meet every requirement, one of which is that no mechanically operated musical instruments be used.

When Radio Inspector C. L. Herndon, of Norfolk, in Atlanta recently, he examined Station WGM for class B and the license was issued upon his return to Washington, with recommendation for the issuance of the license.

Under the new license Station WGM is authorized to broadcast at any time, night or day, without restriction beyond the clause which forbids interference with any other station operating on 400 meters.

Listeners to Station WGM, The Atlanta Constitution, at 9:30 o'clock tonight will hear a program featuring Miss Lucy Mather, teacher of piano, and Miss Vivian Harris, soprano, who will give a recital of songs and piano pieces.

Both of the featured artists on tonight's program are talented and their music will be enjoyed by all who listen to Station WGM.

Miss Mather tonight makes her radio debut from Station WGM. Besides being an excellent teacher of piano, Miss Mather is accomplished as a pianist herself, and for tonight's program she has selected offerings that will be pleasantly received by the wide audiences of Station WGM.

Miss Harris has been heard a number of times before from Station WGM and has been an excellent pianist in the studio of The Constitution which is the source of pleasure to those who have been receivers. Five excellent artists were offered last night between 9:30 and 10:30 o'clock by Station WGM. The Atlanta Constitution, in the presentation of a concert of voice, piano, violin and cornet numbers.

Those who took part in the program besides Charles R. Crane, conductor, who was in charge of the music, were Miss Kathryn Foster, violinist and pianist; Miss Ruth Greene, pianist; Mrs. Crane, pianist; and J. R. Clotworthy, tenor.

Only Mr. Clotworthy, Mr. Crane and Miss Foster, have been heard before from Station WGM and their appearance last for The Constitution radio service brought many telephone calls of commendation for their music.

The concert consisted of trios, duets and solos. Miss Foster is a pupil of George Lindner and her violin selections last night were excellent. Mr. Clotworthy, who is a pupil of Signor E. Mendelssohn, is heard before from Station WGM, and his offerings last night received their usual hearty welcome. Mr. Crane is a cornetist of real ability and Miss Greene and Mrs. Crane are likewise artists.

The program last night opened with Frank J. Stanton's "Mighty Lak a Rose" in a trio with Miss Foster, Mr. Crane and Miss Greene. The closing number was a trio, "Venus on Earth," by Miss Foster and Mr. and Mrs. Crane.

The solos by Mr. Clotworthy were "To Have, to Hold, to Love," "When the Swan Is in Flight" and "The Garden of Roses."

Miss Foster played as violin solos, "Madrigal" and "Andante," by William Tell. Her piano recital consisted of "The Swan Is in Flight" and "The Garden of Roses." Miss Greene had done piano duet, the first movement from Beethoven's "Moonlight Sonata."

The cornet solos by Mr. Crane were "Spring Song" by Mendelssohn, and "Nevassar," a French polka.

After the rush of the Spring Season is over it is our custom to thoroughly clean all of the mixing and storage tanks, also the various containers used in the milling and grinding department, which naturally become more or less coated during the busy season.

The very best products used in the making of high-grade paints, i. e., Pure Linseed Oil, White and Red Lead, Oxide of Zinc and the various other articles required in the manufacture of paints, cling to the sides and bottom of the mixers and tanks. After removing, these materials are combined regardless of color, thoroughly reground, then specially treated and are ready to market as a paint for buildings, barns, roofs and other purposes where color is not an essential feature. As for quality—NOTHING COULD BE BETTER.

STEPS ARE TAKEN TO STOP WEIGHT AND PRICE ABUSE

Steps to curb price and weight abuses charged to peddlers and small operators were begun at a conference Wednesday morning between Mayor Key and twenty-six Atlanta retail and wholesale coal dealers in the office of the mayor at city hall.

Following discussion a committee to study the local situation and recommend corrective measures was appointed. The committee is composed of M. E. Patterson, coal sales manager of the Atlantic Ice and Coal corporation; R. R. Johnson, vice president R. O. Campbell Coal company; Grover McIntire, president of the McIntire Coal company; W. L. Randall, president of the Randall Coal company; and N. U. Patterson, president of the Gunter Coal company. The committee will report to Mayor Key next Tuesday.

A. J. Cloud, city inspector of weights and measures, suggested that peddlers be required to obtain permits, as ice peddlers do. "Then I can put them out of business when they give unfair measure," he said. "As it is now, they can take a bucket of any size and sell it for any amount and I can't handle them unless they say it contains a certain quantity of coal and I find that it does not."

According to spokesmen of the dealers, including J. B. Campbell, the Atlanta dealers are selling to the public at a margin of profit of less than 3 per cent. He stated that the man who is selling coal at $11.50 a ton is making no money on his investment. The dealers pledged to the mayor their co-operation toward assuring consumers coal at the lowest possible price.
